V11N11

November 2013

Welcome to the V11N11 November 2013 issue of the Awareness Watch™ Newsletter. This newsletter is available as a complimentary subscription and will be issued monthly. Each newsletter will feature the following:

Awareness Watch™ Featured Report

Awareness Watch™ Spotters

Awareness Watch™ Book/Paper/Article Review

Subject Tracer™ Information Blogs

I am always open to feedback from readers so please feel free to email with all suggestions, reviews and new resources that you feel would be appropriate for inclusion in an upcoming issue of Awareness Watch™. This is an ongoing work of creativity and you will be observing constant changes, constant updates knowing that “change” is the only thing that will remain constant!!

Awareness Watch™ Featured Report

This month's featured report covers ShoppingBots and Online Shopping 2014. This 18th Annual Report list shopping resources on the Internet and is a comprehensive listing of ecommerce coupons and shopping resources currently available on the Internet. The below list of sources is taken from my Subject Tracer™ Information Blog titled ShoppingBots and is constantly updated with Subject Tracer™ Information Bots (STIB) at the following URL:

<http://www.ShoppingBots.info/>

These resources and sources will help you to discover the many pathways available to you through the Internet to find the latest shopping deals, resources, sources and sites. In today's New Economy it has become one of the primary resources for discussing methods, reviews and utilization of finding shopping and eCommerce resources that are easily available and accessible to save you money and time in your purchase decisions!!

SkilledUp - Find the Best Online Courses

<http://www.skilledup.com/>

Over 70,000 courses from 300+ providers. SkilledUp.com is a portal for online courses and training. They believe that the best and worst thing about online education is that there is a lot out there and its hard to find what matches your needs. There are hundreds of people ready to teach you something via an online course. Some are free; some are expensive; some are wastes of time; and some are just a fabulous use of time. They are trying to help make it easier to compare and make the right choice. Simply enter a keyword of something you are interested in learning and hit enter. That's it. Easy. If you want to browse topics that are interesting to your industry, you can also Browse All Courses by Topic. They display free and paid courses and tutorials. They try to avoid any content that is just a lower-value article rather than a full course or tutorial. Sometimes this doesn't work. They like to err on the side of more courses rather than being too conservative and missing a good resource. This will be added to Tutorial Resources Subject Tracer™.

Scicasts - Science Connected

<http://www.SciCasts.com/>

Scicasts is a media-tech company that connects science professionals and decision makers to a dynamic network of critical information, new ideas and thought leaders. Their core team started their careers as scientists who faced the common challenges faced by thousands of their peers around the world. Particularly in keeping up with the vast, daily flow of scientific news, industry reports, sector-specific trends and key developments. Their strength is through their in-house technology, R&D and in-house staff reporting. With Scicasts, they connect the key science and technology sectors using a distinctive approach that saves their audience time and money from searching and subscribing to multiple publications and news sources. In addition, they employ an engaging participatory news model through a selected community of contributors from world-leading and reputable analyst firms, trade associations and institutions. At Scicasts, they conduct their reporting on all companies, research institutions and individuals with strict independence, fairness and without bias. What drives us is a simple principle: Facilitating knowledge facilitates innovation. For this reason, all of their content and online events are free and fully accessible without any subscription fees. They are big supporters of open science and are moving away from the one-size-fits-all approach applied by many of their competitors. They put their readers in charge! PMC - Free Archive of Biomedical and Life Sciences Journal Literature

<http://www.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/pmc/>

PubMed Central® (PMC) is a free archive of biomedical and life sciences journal literature at the U.S. National Institutes of Health's National Library of Medicine (NIH/NLM). In keeping with NLM's legislative mandate to collect and preserve the biomedical literature, PMC serves as a digital counterpart to NLM's extensive print journal collection. Launched in February 2000, PMC was developed and is managed by NLM's National Center for Biotechnology Information (NCBI). As an archive, PMC is designed to provide permanent access to all of its content, even as technology evolves and current digital literature formats potentially become obsolete. NLM believes that the best way to ensure the accessibility and viability of digital material over time is through consistent and active use of the archive. For this reason, free access to all of its journal literature is a core principle of PMC. Please note, however, that free access does not mean that there is no copyright protection. As described on our copyright page publishers and individual authors continue to hold copyright on the material in PMC and users must abide by the terms defined by the copyright holder. In addition to its role as an archive, the value of PMC lies in its capacity to store and cross-reference data from diverse sources using a common format within a single repository. With PMC, a user can quickly search the entire collection of full-text articles and locate all relevant material. PMC also allows for the integration of its literature with a variety of other information resources

The User Services Unit of the NLM Reference and Web Services Section, Public Services Division, compiled this set of subject guides. The Guides are meant to serve as research starting points for health professionals, researchers, librarians, students, and others. Each guide lists a variety of resources, many of which are Internet accessible and free. The guides are not meant to be comprehensive but to introduce some of the major resources available on each topic. The topics for these Subject Guides are drawn from the most frequently asked questions the Reference and Web Services staff encounters in e-mails and onsite. The User Services Unit plans to update the guides, reviewing them as needed to maintain their links and content. We hope you find the Subject Guides useful. CourseFork - Collaborate On Educational Content

<http://coursefork.org/>

They are building the open education tools they wish were already out there. They believe that open sharing of materials will enable better courses to be taught in more ways and to more students. It will also help them find exciting educators teaching the same things they are. MOOC platforms like Coursera and Udacity are educational media companies in search of viewers for their content. Coursefork develops tools for educators. They see MOOCs as potential distribution channels for our educators' courses.

Regardless of how they reach and teach their students, educators need to connect with others who share our teaching interests. Coursefork gives everyone a public profile that tracks their most popular contributes of courses or content. Anyone can find a Coursefork course, fork it, customize it, and teach it however they choose. This freedom and openness is the best way they can think of to change the future of education. Coursefork is for everyone passionate about teaching. Give visibility to your impact. Contribute to open courses and find collaborators. Join their growing community working to open up education. Sign Up and claim your spot. This has been added to the tools section of Research Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog. This will be added to Tutorial Resources Subject Tracer™. SafeSlinger - Secure Messages Easy

<http://www.cylab.cmu.edu/safeslinger/>

SafeSlinger makes sending secure messages easy. Just keep your passphrase a secret, and only you and the other party can read messages. Messages cannot be read by your cellular carrier, Internet-provider, employer, or anyone else. SafeSlinger is the result of research at Carnegie Mellon's CyLab that resolves a specific security problem. The problem: How can we start a trusted relationship between people, on the fly, without people having sophisticated knowledge of security protocols? Users regularly experience a crisis of confidence on the Internet. Is that email truly originating from the claimed individual? Is that Facebook invitation indeed from that person or is it a fake page set up by an impersonator? These doubts are usually resolved through a leap of faith, expressing the desperation of users. To establish a secure basis for Internet communication, they have implemented SafeSlinger, a system leveraging the proliferation of smartphones to enable people to securely and privately exchange their public keys. Through the exchanged authentic public key, SafeSlinger establishes a secure channel offering secrecy and authenticity, which we use to support secure messaging and file exchange. Essentially, we support an abstraction to safely "sling" information from one device to another. SafeSlinger also provides an API for importing applications' public keys into a user's contact information. By slinging entire contact entries to others, we support secure introductions, as the contact entry includes the SafeSlinger public keys as well as other public keys that were imported. As a result, SafeSlinger provides an easy-to-use and understand approach for trust establishment among people. Cryptography alone cannot address this problem. They have many useful protocols such as SSL or PGP for entities that already share authentic key material, but the root of the problem still remains: how do we obtain the authentic public key from the intended resource or individual? The global certification process for SSL is not without drawbacks and weaknesses, and the usability challenges of decentralized mechanisms such as PGP are well-known. The problem of human-oriented, trust establishment is fundamental; no amount of automation and "fail-safe" defaults can avoid the need for basic trust decisions to be made by humans (system administrators and ordinary users alike), since they ultimately assume the risks of digital communication, accessing remote sites, allowing remote access to their local resources, and employing other users' services. To counteract these challenges, they designed SafeSlinger as an easy-to-use application that offers many benefits to drive usage. Per Metcalfe's law, the utility of a system grows with the square of the number of users. Our goal is thus to provide immediate utility to enable epidemic growth. They achieve immediate utility through the robust exchange of contact list information between different smartphone platforms, which does not require any location information or leak private information outside the participating phones. SafeSlinger also provides simple and secure messaging and file transfer that is immediately usable. Because the messages are encrypted and require a password to access, many teens may find this appealing to protect their messages from peers and parents. Through free multi-platform applications available on smartphone markets, open documentation, and open-source code, they anticipate wide adoption of SafeSlinger. Assuming wide adoption, they hope to provide usable and secure communication for the masses, and a security platform that

The Biology Project

<http://www.biology.arizona.edu/>

Welcome to The Biology Project, an interactive online resource for learning biology developed at The University of Arizona. The Biology Project is fun, richly illustrated, and tested on 1000s of students. It has been designed for biology students at the college level, but is useful for high school students, medical students, physicians, science writers, and all types of interested people. Teachers can assign problems sets for reviews before exams, or may want to assign an activity before students cover that topic in their laboratory. Computers are an excellent means of encouraging cooperative learning, so teachers might even have their students work in small groups. Link to specific Biology Project activities from your course home page, or bookmark The Biology Project on your computer. Students will find that the information covered in The Biology Project is probably just what they've been studying in their introductory biology course, and advanced students will find these materials to be a useful review. All students will benefit from the real-life applications of biology and the inclusion of up-to-date research findings. approach to Decision Sciences. They believe that leveraging data effectively to enable Decision Support requires a combination of Data Engineering, Data Sciences and Decision Sciences. Data Engineering is the application of technology for collecting, storing, processing, transforming and structuring of data. Data Sciences refers to the application of math and technology to solve focused business problems with well-defined scopes. However, the dynamic nature of business requires Decision Sciences, an interdisciplinary approach of business, applied math, technology, design thinking and behavioural sciences, to solve constantly shifting and ill-defined business problems. <https://www.mashape.com/stremor/stremor-automated-summary-and-abstract-generator#!documentation>

Use the Automated Summaries API to generate instant 350 character (+/- 10%) summaries of long content from text or URLs. Summaries are returned as highly readable paragraphs with complete sentences for the best end-user experience. Use the returned content for executive summaries of internal documents, previews of articles, efficient mobile pages, email abstract previews, or just about any instance where your end user will benefit from a summary rather than simple snippet. Language Heuristics goes a step beyond Natural Language Processing to extract intent from text. Summaries are created through extraction, but maintain readability by keeping sentence dependencies intact. HTML pages are passed through a template removal process so that only the article text is summarized avoiding comments, menus, headers, and footers. Wickr - Leave No Trace

<https://www.mywickr.com/>

Wickr was founded in San Francisco, California by a team of security and privacy experts that believe private communications is a universal human right that is extremely important to a free society. Today, that right is almost nonexistent. Wickr protects Article 12 of the United Nations Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

Wickr's founders also believe that anonymous communications is important to our political and social discourse. Wickr supports the 1st Amendment of the United States. Their patent-pending technology brings sophisticated security and privacy to everybody. Wickr's protocol for ephemeral messaging and media uses standard encryption algorithms (AES256, ECDH521, RSA 4096 & TLS) implemented for mobile devices. This protocol will be integrated into other communications platforms, creating a unified mobile messaging platform that is private, encrypted and anonymous. Wickr's mission is to provide secure communications that Leave No Trace. People are being tracked online and their information is being sold in ways they do not understand by numerous governments and corporations throughout the world. Your private communications are worth money. Online communications should be untraceable by default. Companies like Apple, Facebook and Google offer messaging that is archived, easily traceable, controlled by the recipient, shared with strangers and sold to marketers. Making Data – Big Data and Beyond - Special Issue First Monday

<http://firstmonday.org/ojs/index.php/fm/issue/view/404>

Abstract:

Data are widely understood as minimal units of information about the world, waiting to be found and collected by scholars and other analysts. With the recent prominence of big data, the assumption that data are simply available and plentiful has become more pronounced in research as well as public debate. Challenging and reflecting on this assumption, this special issue considers how data are made. Papers by Nancy K. Baym, Tom Boellstorff, Axel Bruns, Alexander Halavais, Rasmus Helles, Klaus Bruhn Jensen, Annette N. Markham, and Farida Vis take big data and other characteristic features of the digital media environment as an opportunity to revisit classic issues concerning data — big and small, fast and slow, experimental and naturalistic, quantitative and qualitative, found, and made.

Subject Tracer™ Information Blogs

Subject Tracer™ Information Blogs created and developed by the Virtual Private Library™ combine the best of the latest tools on the Internet. Using bots, blogs and news aggregators the Subject Tracer™ Information blogs generate RSS feeds with the latest resources to create a current information resource flow through niched subject tracers. I am proud to be the creator of the Internet's first Subject Tracer™ Information Blogs:
