250+ Killer Digital Libraries and Archives

<http://oedb.org/ilibrarian/250-plus-killer-digital-libraries-and-archives/>

The title of this website says it all. A feature of the iLibrarian blog from the Open Education Database (OEDb), readers will find here a list of over 250 excellent digital libraries and archives. The list is categorized by state; within each state, resources are alphabetized. For instance, the state of Arkansas is home to the Arkansas History Commission Archives, the Arkansas State Library, and the University of Arkansas Libraries Digital Collection. Each link is accompanied by a short annotation describing the resource – the Main State Archives boasts collections of "trademarks, Civil War 'Yarns,' and more." Readers will also find a list of Recent Posts and the Most Popular Posts from the iLibrarian blog, which often focuses its attention on free educational resources, such as open webinars, university courses, and informal learning sources. This will be added to Reference Resources Subject Tracer™. This will be added to the tools section of Research Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog. From The Scout Report, Copyright Internet Scout 1994-2015. <https://www.scout.wisc.edu>

Updated> Academic and Scholar Search Engines and Sources

<http://www.ScholarSearchEngines.com/>

Internet Annotated Link Dataset Compilation titled "Academic and Scholar Search Engines and Sources" is now a 68 page research paper listing selected resources both new and existing that will help anyone who is attempting to find academic and scholarly information and knowledge available on the Internet. Each source is described along with the URL address than can be accessed. It is freely available as a .pdf file (447KB) at the above link from the Virtual Private Library™ and authored by Marcus P. Zillman, M.S., A.M.H.A. [Updated: June 1, 2015]. Other white papers are available by clicking here.

Updated> Financial Sources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog White Paper Link Dataset Compilation

<http://www.FinancialSources.info/>

The above is the associated white paper link dataset compilation of the Financial Sources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog by Marcus P. Zillman, M.S., A.M.H.A. It is a 34 page .pdf document 254KB. [Updated on June 1, 2015] Other white papers are available by clicking here.

State of Creative Commons Report

<https://stateof.creativecommons.org/report/>

At its heart, Creative Commons is a simple idea. It's the idea that when people share their creativity and knowledge with each other, amazing things can happen. It's not a new idea. People have been adapting and building on each other's work for centuries. Musicians sample beats from each other's music. Artists create entirely new works from other people's images. Teachers borrow each other's activities and lesson plans. Scientists build off of each other's results to make new discoveries. They believe that sharing — sometimes it happens in an instant, sometimes it spreads across generations — is how society grows, how culture develops, and how innovation happens. We also believe that copyright can often get in the way, usually without the copyright-holder's intention. That's why they created the Creative Commons licenses. Millions of creators around the world use CC licenses to give others permission to use their work in ways that they wouldn't otherwise be allowed to. Those millions of users are the proof that Creative Commons works. But measuring the size of the commons has always been a challenge. There's no sign-up to use a CC license, and no central repository or catalog of CC-licensed works. So it's impossible to say precisely how many licensed works there are, how many people are using Creative Commons licenses, where those people are located, or how they're using them. With this report, they are taking a big step toward better measuring the size of the commons. They are also sharing all of the data and methodologies that they used to find these numbers, and making a commitment to hone and update these findings in the months and years to come. They are also telling the stories of events from 2014 that have impacted the size, usability, and relevance of the commons. This will be added to Research Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog.

They have built a market-leading product, made thousands of customers happy and continue our fast pace of innovation. They are proud of their success so far, but this is just the beginning of their exciting journey. They have a lot of great ideas on how to make businesses even more productive. Wrike was founded in 2006 and has over 6,000 paid customers. We've raised $10MM+ in venture funding from prominent investors including Bain Capital. Our customers include teams at Google, Stanford, eBay and more. Wrike is a full-featured and easy-to-use project management system that is trusted by thousands of co-located and distributed teams for project planning, tracking and online collaboration. Traditional project management tools put the burden of creating and updating project plans, keeping teams up-to-date with the schedule and tracking project progress on the managers' shoulders. Wrike offers an online project management solution that minimizes the load of administrative tasks and lets you focus on what's important. Do you assign tasks to your employees by writing dozens of e-mails each day? Wrike allows you to build accurate schedules and collaborate without leaving your familiar environment — e-mail. Online collaboration brought to you by Wrike makes your planning and work faster, easier and more efficient. Project updates are communicated to the team members in real time. Wrike is a project management software solution with a built-in interactive Gantt chart that visualizes your plans and allows you to easily update them in real time. Taking advantage of Wrike's project planning tools, not only you get effective timeline software at your service, but also easier and quicker project tracking. Wrike's Dynamic Timeline is tailored to make your time tracking efficient and help you stay on top of things. Wrike allows you to share projects with your stakeholders, clients and partners and get them involved in your online project management and collaboration. Wrike's scalability makes it a great match both for SMB project management and enterprise project management. Thousands of businesses worldwide choose Wrike for its powerful combo of online features wrapped into a friendly, social interface. Wrike is business management software that combines the functionality of project planning, marketing project management, scheduling software, task management and time tracking software. Wrike integrates with popular productivity tools to make it easy for you to manage your day-to-day work and get it done on time. ### Wikilerts - Never Miss Out On Anything Ever Again

<http://www.wikilerts.com/>

They are building the Wikipedia for alerts - a community-driven alert platform on all topics. We constantly miss out on stuff - be it a special deal, a video game release, a health hazard, a new restaurant opening or whatever. Sometimes we're lucky and hear about it eventually; but it would have been much better if we knew about it sooner. Why, in the age of the internet and abundant information, does that still happen? They believe it's due to a lack of reliable and specific alert services which only send the information which is required (and not all the other garbage, as most social networks do). Wikilerts is an innovative approach to fix this by: a) Harnessing the power of communities to acquire information; b) Applying sophisticated reporting and verification processes to ensure that the information is correct and c) Channeling the information so that it only gets delivered to those users who are interested in it. ## WLCG – Worldwide LHC Computing Grid

<http://wlcg-public.web.cern.ch/>

Data pours out of the LHC detectors at a blistering rate. Even after filtering out 99% of it, there is still around 30 petabytes of data per year to deal with. That's 30 million gigabytes, the equivalent to nearly 9 million high-definition (HD) movies. The scale and complexity of data from the LHC is unprecedented. This data needs to be stored, easily retrieved and analysed by physicists all over the world. This requires massive storage facilities, global networking, immense computing power, and, of course, funding. CERN does not have the computing or financial resources to crunch all of the data on site, so in 2002 it turned to grid computing to share the burden with computer centres around the world. The result, the Worldwide LHC Computing Grid (WLCG), is a distributed computing infrastructure arranged in tiers – giving a community of over 10,000 physicists near real-time access to LHC data. The WLCG builds on the ideas of grid technology initially proposed in 1999 by Ian Foster and Carl Kesselman(link is external). With more than 10,000 LHC physicists across the four main experiments – ALICE, ATLAS, CMS and LHCb – actively accessing and analysing data in near real-time, the computing system designed to handle the data has to be very flexible. WLCG provides seamless access to computing resources which include data storage capacity, processing power, sensors, visualization tools and more. Users make job requests from one of the many entry points into the system. A job will entail the processing of a requested set of data, using software provided by the experiments. The computing Grid establishes the identity of the user, checks their credentials, and searches for available sites that can provide the resources requested. Users do not have to worry about where the computing resources are coming from – they can tap into the Grid's computing power and access storage on demand. ## Burnout Research

<http://www.journals.elsevier.com/burnout-research/>

According to the Oxford English Dictionary, burnout is "physical or mental collapse caused by overwork or stress." Coined by the American psychologist Herbert Freudenberger in the 1970s to describe the sort of emotional emptiness experienced by doctors, nurses, and mental health professionals, the term has gained popularity outside the helping professions. But what is burnout, and how is it different from other diagnoses like depression? The journal Burnout Research, published online by Elsevier, seeks to answer just these sorts of questions. Articles like "Burnout, work engagement and workaholism among highly educated employees: Profiles, antecedents and outcomes" are freely available to the interested reader. Especially interesting are the 100-word Lay Summaries, tidbits written in a style anyone can understand. This will be added to Healthcare Resources Subject Tracer™. ## Genius - Annotating the Internet

<http://genius.com/>

Bringing the dreams of the original internet into the future... Only a handful of people know that the web browser's big missing feature—the feature that was supposed to be in from the start but didn't make it—is the ability to annotate any page on the Internet. With the Genius Beta, it's now possible to add context, commentary, and images directly on top of any web page using only your browser. This has been added to the tools section of Research Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog.

Private.me - Empowers Internet Users To Keep Their Personal Data Private

<https://we.private.me/>

Private.me Puts You in Control of Your Own Data. Their easy to use tools and patent pending privacy solution ensure that you always have complete control over how and when your personal data is accessed or shared. Features: a) Take control of the information you want to keep private; b) Grant access to your data only as you deem appropriate; c) Keep your data from being shared or used irresponsibly or against your wishes; and d) Easily manage your settings through a simple control panel. When you browse the Internet through Private.me, your searches will never be seen, stored, or accessed by any single person or entity. Still, you can choose to keep and revisit your search history, or delete it forever. They offer more utility than search anonymizers, and more privacy than search engines! They invite you to read and learn about the patent pending solution that they deploy to make this possible. They believe that an individual's privacy should be valued and protected and they are doing everything they can to help protect people's personal data and information. They have introduced private search, but they are not stopping there. They have more exciting new privacy tools in development and on their way. Check back often to learn about our new privacy services! Using a patent pending privacy solution, they have the only truly "forgetful" system in which no single entity (including them) can access any user's personal data without explicit consent. When you call back your data (your search history, for example), the useless bits of information get decrypted, re-assembled, and presented back to you. At all other times, your data is unreadable, unreachable, disassembled, and useless. When you use a Private.me service, all of your personal data is immediately encrypted, sliced up, and distributed between geographically dispersed non-profit organizations. These non-profits are set up specifically to be stewards of user data. Why non-profits? They are better designed to protect your data than a for-profit company. ## Research and Development Project - Enabling Federated Cloud Networking

<http://www.beacon-project.eu/>

Beacon is a Research and Development project, which receives funding from the EU through its Horizon 2020 framework programme. The main goal of this project is two-fold: research and develop techniques to federated cloud network resources, and to derive the integrated management cloud layer that enables an efficient and secure deployment of federated cloud applications. BEACON will deliver an homogeneous virtualization layer, on top of heterogeneous underlying physical networks, computing and storage infrastructures, providing enablement for automated federation of applications across different clouds and datacenters. The BEACON project is fully committed to open source software, the research and development activities of the consortium will be based on existing open source projects. Cloud networking aspects will be based on OpenDayLight, a collaborative project under The Linux Foundation, and specifically we will leverage and extend the OpenDOVE project with new rich intercloud APIs to provision cross-site virtual networks overlays. Coping With the Big Data Dump – Towards a Framework for Enhanced Information Representation by Andreas Kratky, Virginia Kuhn and Jon Olav Eikenes
<http://firstmonday.org/ojs/index.php/fm/article/view/5507>

Abstract:

Easy and efficient access to large amounts of data has become an essential aspect of our everyday life. In this paper we investigate possibilities of supporting information representation through the combined use of multiple modalities of perceptions such as sight, touch and kinesthetics. We present a theoretical framework to analyze these approaches and exemplify our findings with case studies of three emergent projects. The results are a contribution to a larger discussion of multimodal information representation at the intersection of theory and practice.
