V14N7                                                                                              July 2016

Welcome to the V14N7 July 2016 issue of the Awareness Watch™ Newsletter. This newsletter is available as a complimentary subscription and is issued monthly. Each newsletter will feature the following:

Awareness Watch™ Featured Report
Awareness Watch™ Spotters
Awareness Watch™ Book/Paper/Article Review
Subject Tracer™ Information Blogs

I am always open to feedback from readers so please feel free to email with all suggestions, reviews and new resources that you feel would be appropriate for inclusion in an upcoming issue of Awareness Watch™. This is an ongoing work of creativity and you will be observing constant changes, constant updates knowing that "change" is the only thing that will remain constant!!

Awareness Watch™ Featured Report

NEA: The 10 Best STEM Resources
http://www.nea.org/tools/lessons/stem-resources.html
The National Education Association (NEA) has assembled a first-rate list of STEM Resources on this website. Here interested readers will find links to such venerable STEM education vendors as the Exploratorium, which features interactives, web features, activities, and online programs; NASA for Educators, which is loaded with lesson plans, teacher guides, classroom activities, video clips, games, and posters; eGFI: Dream Up the Future, a site that promotes engineering for students between kindergarten and late high school; and Kinetic City, a site for elementary school students that is veritably bursting with science games for students. There are also several STEM-related professional development sites, such as the STEM Education Resource Center. In all, STEM educators, parents, and mentors of students between the ages of five and 18 will find a wealth of possibilities in this collection of sites. PredictWise
http://predictwise.com
From politics to sports to market research to just about every conceivable business venture, the ability to accurately - or even semi-accurately - predict the future comes with profound benefits. It is no surprise, then, that economist David M. Rothschild's PredictWise has become so popular among pundits of all kinds. Using peer-reviewed prediction and sentiment models, Rothschild accurately predicted 50 of 51 Electoral College outcomes in February of 2012, an average of 20 of 24 Oscars from 2013 to 2015, and 15 of 15 knockout games in the 2014 World Cup. Readers may like to begin by scouting the latest political figures, which currently predict Democratic victories in both the presidential election and the upcoming Senate race. From there, scan the Sports section (as of May 12, 2016 the Chicago Cubs have a 20 percent chance of winning the world series), as well as predictions Entertainment and Economic/Financial. Readers will also find a link to Rothschild's blog, where he unpacks some of his predictions in greater detail. This will be added to Prediction Markets Subject Tracer™. ## APA: Education and Psychology

http://www.apa.org/education

The American Psychological Association (APA) has been disseminating empirically based psychological information since its founding in 1892. On this portion of the APA site dedicated to Education and Psychology, readers will find articles in four categories: Pre-K to 12 Education, Undergraduate Education, Graduate and Postgraduate Education, and Continuing Education. Each category is packed with information. For example, in the Undergraduate Education section, readers will find resources dedicated to Psychology as a Career and links to Tools for Teachers, which include Curriculum and Teaching, Faculty Development, and Diversity Issues. The Pre-K to 12 Education section features resources about Curricular Materials, Classroom Behavior, and Creativity in the Classroom, among others. In all, the collection is suitable for both teachers looking for all kinds of psychology based resources and students searching for a better understanding of the psychological sciences and associated fields. ## The World Bank: Annual Report 2015

http://www.worldbank.org/en/about/annual-report

The World Bank has been publishing an annual report, in which it provides an in-depth analysis of a particular aspect of economic development, since 1978. Past reports have tackled such topics as agriculture, youth, equity, public services delivery, labor, and infrastructure. The Annual Report 2015 focused its energies on the intention to end extreme poverty around the world by the year 2030. Here readers may peruse the Report's sections, including Leadership Perspectives, Operational Highlights, Regions, Roles and Resources, Fiscal Year Data, Financial Statements, and WBG Summary Results. The WBG Summary Results section is especially interesting, as it features a map that outlines where the World Bank invested $60 billion in loans, grants, equity investments, and guarantees to partner countries and private businesses. For readers who are interested in the global effort to reduce poverty, or in the World Bank's policies more generally, this page will serve as an informative resource. ## Atlas of Emotions

http://atlasofemotions.com

In June 2014, world renowned emotions expert Paul Ekman sent a survey out to 248 active emotion researchers around the world. In their responses, 88 percent of the respondents agreed that there are Universal Emotions, that is, emotions that all humans feel, no matter where they live or how they are raised. There was also a broad consensus on which emotions are universal, including anger, fear, disgust, sadness, and enjoyment. To navigate this engaging Atlas of Emotions, readers may select any of the five emotions to begin. From there, readers will find more information, including categories such as Triggers, Actions, and Moods. For instance, selecting Triggers under the Anger emotion leads to a graphic depicting the typical triggers that lead to an angry response, such as encountering offensive beliefs, being wrongfully accused, and rejection by a loved one. The site is exceptional for its interactive graphics and a layout that breaks down complex topics into easily understandable information. Anyone who wants to better understand human emotions will find much to appreciate here. This will be added to Healthcare Resources Subject Tracer™. WordClouds - Free Online Wordcloud Generator

http://www.wordclouds.com/Wordclouds.com is a free online word cloud generator and tag cloud creator. Wordclouds.com works on your PC, Tablet or smartphone. Paste text, upload a document or open an URL to automatically generate a word- or tag cloud. Customize your cloud with shapes, themes, colors and fonts. You can also edit the word list, cloud size and gap size. Wordclouds.com can also generate clickable word clouds with links (image map). When you are satisfied with the result, save the image and share it online. This will be added to Entrepreneurial Resources Subject Tracer™.

Kahoot!
https://getkahoot.com/Kahoot! is a service that allows teachers to create educational games for their students in a matter of minutes. The games are usually built from a series of multiple choice questions, onto which teachers may add videos, images, and diagrams in order to encourage engagement. The games are designed to be played interactively, in a group setting, in which each player answers questions on his or her own device while games are displayed at the front of the room so every student can engage in the total experience of the lesson. There is also a social learning component, in that students contribute to discussion boards and chat rooms in order to deepen their understanding. Study Guide for the Systems of the Body
https://www.acls.net/study-guide-body-systems.htm
Have you ever wondered how you can eat the things that you eat or how you can breathe or move your arms? If you think about it, it's pretty amazing that the human body can do all of the things that it does. Your body is made up of what are called systems. These systems are collections of organs and body parts that work together for a common goal. For example, your bones are all a part of the skeletal system. They work together to give your body shape and so that you can move. They also work together to protect your important organs, like your heart. The other systems that you have in your body are the circulatory, respiratory, muscular, digestive, and nervous systems. Each of these systems are very important, and everyone has them. It's important for kids to understand what the systems of the body are so that they can understand how important it is to keep the body healthy. Media, Technology and Culture Open Access Audio Lectures
http://culturedigitally.org/Last fall Josh Braun began teaching the "Media, Technology & Culture" undergraduate course at UMass Amherst. He decided to run a "flipped classroom," wherein students would listen to many (though not all) of the lectures outside of class and spend their time in person discussing the material. In addition to opening up lots of class time for more in-depth and personable discussions, the main attraction of this format has been that it's allowed him to introduce lots of voices into the course that aren't just his own. As he put together the lectures—all of which are formatted as podcasts—he took the opportunity to invite scholars in each of their subject areas to read from their work or answer interview questions. NSF: Earth & Environment Classroom Resources
https://www.nsf.gov/news/classroom/earth-environ.jsp
The Classroom Resources section of the National Science Foundation website is extensive and impressive. Take, for instance, this collection of Earth & Environment Classroom Resources. Here educators will discover links to 16 different resources, most of which have been culled from the National Science Digital Library (NSDL). Notable resources include the Earth & Environment Research Overview, a site that explains the important work that scientists are doing on the feedback loop between how humans impact the environment and how the environment, in turn, affects human communities. The material here ranges from K-12 to higher education. For instance, while college instructors may be interested in the Science Education Resource Center at Carleton College, an organization that works to improve undergraduate science education through projects that focus on faculty support, elementary school teachers may prefer Geography4Kids, which helps younger children explore the earth through engaging activities. Indeed, this list of more than a dozen resources has a little something for everyone. This will be added to Education and Academic Resources Subject Tracer™. ## Forum Network http://www.forum-network.org

The Forum Network is an online public media service provided by WGBH, Boston's premier public broadcasting company. On the Network, readers will find hundreds of video and audio lectures from scholars from around the world, as well as talks by authors, artists, scientists, policymakers, and community leaders. All content on the website is free, thanks to a grant by the Lowell Institute. After perusing the landing page, which usually features new and popular content, readers may like to scout according to the three available tabs: Lectures, Speakers, and Events. For instance, within Lectures, readers will find 154 possibilities, including talks on Deep Sea Volcanoes, All About Bees, The Mystery of Whale Eyesight and (Big) Things that Go Bump in the Night, and What To Know About Geoengineering. Readers may also narrow the search by Topic (Art & Architecture, Culture &  Identity, Health & Happiness, Literature & Philosophy, and others); Time Period (Prehistoric, Ancient & Classical, Middle Ages, Renaissance, and more); and Series, such as the African American Culture Series and the American Experience Series. ### Smartmarker - Whiteboarding Beyond the Surface http://www.myequil.com/smartmarker/Write anywhere. Capture everything. Share around the world. Be more productive with Equil Smartmarker. Make your meetings more effective and interactive by streaming your notes in real time. Slip an everyday marker into the sleeve and wherever you go, whatever you write, with whatever device you use, you and your team can collaborate together easily. Work together, when you're not together. Stream to one person or a hundred, from Kathmandu to Kalamazoo. Help your global team feel more local by allowing remote team members to annotate your notes and stay connected. Ready, set, write. Be spontaneous and creative. Using Equil Smartmarker is a breeze — just turn it on and start writing. With no calibration or training required, it doesn't get in the way of your big ideas. With the sensor's built-in memory, be confident that everything you write is saved. You think it, now sync it. Keep your ever-growing stream of notes organized and accessible using Dropbox, Evernote, iCloud and more. And of course, you can export and share with your favorite apps. Big ideas need room to grow. That's why we're giving you the world's largest capture area. Generate diagrams, charts, lists and mind maps on surfaces up to 16ft x 5ft (5m x 1.5m). Say goodbye to "family" photos of your whiteboard. Separate your work notes from your personal life. Equil Smartmarker lets you organize, title, and tag your notes to help you find content faster. Unlike photos, your notes stay editable, allowing you to select and manipulate each individual stroke. Whiteboards aren't portable. You are. Citizen science is the idea that anyone, any citizen, can volunteer their time for the good of scientific research and discovery without having to be formally trained. SciStarter is the place to find and participate in citizen science projects, whether that be an extension of one of your current hobbies, like collecting data while bird watching (The Great Backyard Bird Count), or a fun educational activity to do with a child, like collecting bugs (Urban Buzz). As a repository for citizen science projects, the SciStarter Project Finder lets users search for projects and opportunities by type of activity, such as something to do exclusively online, or by topic, such as animals, geography, or health and medicine. There are also ways to limit your search by location, by free or low cost projects, or by projects suitable for students. Each entry includes general information about the project and a link to more information about how to participate. If you're looking to contribute a project to the database, the For Scientists section of the website offers an easy way to add suggestions, while the blog discusses outcomes of current citizen science fueled projects. # Awarenesswatch™ Paper Review

Web 2.0 User Knowledge and the Limits of Individual and Collective Power by
http://firstmonday.org/ojs/index.php/fm/article/view/6793

Abstract:

This paper revisits and builds upon a prominent theme in First Monday's 2008 "Critical perspectives on Web 2.0" special issue: exploration and critique of the claim that Web 2.0 "... provides novel opportunities for the articulation of individual and collective social power by enhancing participation in media production and cultural expression" (Zimmer, 2008). This article refreshes the critique by examining how impediments to users' technical knowledge about how Web 2.0 platforms function affect user power.  After reviewing how the scholarly literature on Web 2.0 accounts for the user knowledge/user power connection, this paper suggests Braman's (2006) concept of "informational power" as a useful heuristic for exploring how access to information about how Web 2.0 platforms function operates as a "genetic" facet of user power. Then, using Braman's framework, the article reviews two cases of struggle over informational power in regards to the Twitter platform: controversy over the Library of Congress Twitter archive and Occupy Wall Street protesters inaccurately accusing Twitter of censorship because of a misunderstanding about "Trending Topics." Through the application of Braman's framework to these cases, it becomes clear how users' prospects for developing technical knowledge about the platforms shape the limits and horizons of individual and collective power.
