ReDash - Make Your Company Data Driven

<https://redash.io/>

Redash is an open source tool for teams to query, visualize and collaborate. Redash is quick to setup and works with any data source you might need so you can query from anywhere in no time. Share your results and dashboards with other team members and empower your entire organization to be data driven with no-code filters and parameters that instantly adjust. Get alerts for pre-defined triggers to your email, Slack or Hipchat (you can setup a custom webhook as well). Redash is our take on freeing the data within our company in a way that will better fit our culture and usage patterns. We tried to use traditional BI suites and discovered a set of bloated, technically challenged and slow tools/flows. What we were looking for was a more hacker'ish way to look at data, so we built one. Redash was built to allow fast and easy access to billions of records, that we process and collect using Amazon Redshift ("petabyte scale data warehouse" that "speaks" PostgreSQL). Today Redash has support for querying multiple databases, including: Redshift, Google BigQuery, Google Spreadsheets, PostgreSQL, MySQL, Graphite, Axibase Time Series Database and custom scripts. Main Features include: 1) Query editor - enjoy all the latest standards like auto-complete and snippets. Share both your results and queries to support an open and data driven approach within the organization; 2) Visualization - once you have your dataset, select one of our /9 types of visualizations/ for your query. You can also export or embed it anywhere; 3) Dashboard - combine several visualizations into a topic targeted dashboard; 4) Alerts - get notified via email, Slack, Hipchat or a webhook when your query's results need attention; and 5) API - anything you can do with the UI, you can do with the API. Easily connect results to other systems or automate your workflows. This will be added to Entrepreneurial Resources Subject Tracer™. OpenupEd - Worldwide Large MOOC Provider for Higher Education

<http://www.openuped.eu/>

OpenupEd is an open, non-profit partnership offering MOOCs that contribute to open up education – much to the benefit of individual learners and the wider society. The vision is to reach out to all those learners who are interested to take part in online higher education in a way that meets their needs and accommodates their particular situation. OpenupEd is, worldwide, one of the largest MOOC providers for higher education. They consider MOOCs (Massive Open Online Courses) to be: a) online courses designed for large numbers of participants; b) that can be accessed by anyone anywhere as long as they have an internet connection; c) are open to everyone without entry qualifications; and d) and offer a full/complete course experience online for free. The reasons behind this definition can be found in this separate document. In addition, they see MOOCs as part of open education. This implies ‘openness’ in the sense not only of no financial cost, but also open accessibility, open licensing policy, freedom of place, pace and time of study, open entry, and open pedagogy. Next they see openness as an important business driver, enhancing the circulation of knowledge and increasing the pace of innovation. Advanced RECAP Search - Court Listener

Search our database of millions of PACER documents and dockets. The RECAP Archive is a searchable collection of millions of PACER documents and dockets that were gathered using their RECAP Extensions for Firefox and Chrome. This unique archive was created to partially address what they see as the PACER Problem. Using this archive, you can finally search and download millions of PACER documents, including those that were originally scanned PDFs, which they laboriously convert to text. This work was made possible thanks to a partnership with The Center for Information Technology Policy at Princeton, the generous data contributions of thousands of RECAP users, and a ton of volunteer support. Higher Learning Commission: Collection of Papers

<http://cop.hlcommission.org>

Established in 1895, the Higher Learning Commission accredits college and university institutions in nineteen states. The Commission hosts an annual conference that invites participating institutions to speak on the accreditation process, as well as best practices for institutional administration, curriculum, and pedagogy. A collection of papers is published from each annual conference - the link above takes visitors to an organized collection of papers from 2016, which can be browsed by category. Individual paper topics include: developing meaningful assessments with limited resources, using social media to engage institutional stakeholders, and developing a "graduate experience" in two-year master's programs. These papers are authored by professionals at public universities, private four-year colleges, and two-year colleges. Additionally, visitors can explore archived collections of papers dating back to 2013 in the Archives tab. This will be added to Education and Academic Resources Subject Tracer™. Awarenesswatch™ Paper Review

Have We Finally Bridged the Digital Divide? Smart Phone and Internet Use Patterns by Race and Ethnicity by Robert W. Fairlie

<http://firstmonday.org/ojs/index.php/fm/article/view/8005>

Abstract:

Two decades ago an influential article documented the alarming disparities that existed in access to computers and the Internet between African-Americans and whites (Hoffman and Novak, 1998). Using the latest U.S. Census Bureau/Bureau of Labor Statistics data on computer and Internet access, I find that the “digital divide” has not been bridged and remains as large as it was two decades ago. African-Americans and Latino-Americans are less likely to use the Internet on smart phones, computer, tablets or other devices than are whites. A statistical decomposition analysis reveals that income and education inequalities are the leading causes of the disparities in access to technology. The findings have implications for policies that subsidize broadband to low-income families.
