V16N4

April 2018

Welcome to the V16N4 April 2018 issue of the Awareness Watch™ Newsletter. This newsletter is available as a complimentary subscription and will be issued monthly. Each newsletter will feature the following:

Awareness Watch™ Featured Report

Awareness Watch™ Spotters

Awareness Watch™ Book/Paper/Article Review

Subject Tracer™ Information Blogs

I am always open to feedback from readers so please feel free to email with all suggestions, reviews and new resources that you feel would be appropriate for inclusion in an upcoming issue of Awareness Watch™. This is an ongoing work of creativity and you will be observing constant changes, constant updates knowing that “change” is the only thing that will remain constant!!

Awareness Watch™ Featured Report

This month’s featured report covers Privacy Resources 2018 and is a comprehensive listing of privacy resources including search engines, directories, subject guides and index resources and sites on the Internet. The below list of sources is taken from my Subject Tracer™ white paper titled Privacy Resources 2018 and is constantly updated with Subject Tracer™ bots at the following URLs:

<http://www.PrivacyResources.info/>

These resources and sources will help you to discover the many pathways available through the Internet to find the latest privacy sources, resources and sites. As this site is constantly updated it would be to your benefit to bookmark and return to the above URL frequently. The true way to search the Internet and social media for privacy resources is to use PrivacyResources.info and include the deep web. These resources will be your pathfinder to all the important and ever changing privacy resources including the New Economy!

JournalGuide - Find the Best Journal for Your Research

<https://www.journalguide.com/>

JournalGuide is a free tool created by a group of software developers, former researchers, and scholarly publishing veterans at Research Square. Their goal for JournalGuide is to bring all sources of data together in one place to give authors a simple way to choose the best journal for their research. Their data sources include major industry data sets, public resources, information submitted directly by journal editors, and even real-life publishing experiences submitted by authors like you. They are just getting started, but they will continually expand their database to include more areas of study and new sources of information. A growing journal database across all academic fields. Search, filter, sort, and compare journals from more than 46,000 titles. Features include: a) Search - They

How to Make a Web Crawler With Selenium

<https://www.makeuseof.com/tag/make-web-crawler-selenium/>

Web Crawling is extremely useful to automate certain tasks performed routinely on websites. You can write a crawler to interact with a website just as a human would do. In an earlier article, they covered the basics of writing a webcrawler using the python module, scrapy. The limitation of that approach is that the crawler does not support javascript. It will not work properly with those websites that make heavy use of javascript to manage the user interface. For such situations, you can write a crawler which uses Google Chrome and hence can handle javascript just like a normal user-driven Chrome browser. Automating Google Chrome involves use of a tool called Selenium. It is a software component which sits between your program and the Browser, and helps you drive the browser through your program. In this article, they take you through the complete process of automating Google Chrome. This will be added to Bot Research Subject Tracer™. ### Crypterium - A Cryptobank for Everyone

<http://crypteriumnews.com/>

Crypterium is revolutionary digital mobile cryptobank. Crypterium is aiming on provision of comprehensive vertical integrated services, considering collaboration with other cryptocurrency solutions and teams of blockchain enthusiasts. Crypterium is a digital cryptobank that allows users to pay with cryptocurrency in 42 million stores worldwide. It operates without a physical card, limits or even commission. The underlying goal of this project is to provide an accessible blockchain-based payment system worldwide. Although Crypterium appears to be similar to other cryptobanks, it has invested heavily in contactless mobile payment technologies. Clearly, the organization believes that plastic cards have no place in the future. Rather than wait for a plastic card to arrive in the mail, users can begin transacting on the platform immediately after installation. The company's business model is focused on transactions whereby every merchant pays Crypterium a portion of its settlement. Therefore, users are not required to pay to use the platform. DropBox, Box, Evernote, Outlook, Exchange, Gmail, Yahoo Mail, Laptops, External Hard Drives, iPhones, iPads, and Findo will search from one place across your locations. Save time. Enjoy life. Findo increases productivity by having that information at your finger tips; b) Search by Description - «Find the presentation from someone from Boston i received 3 months ago». This is what we call «search by description». When you can't recall the name of that person or that company search with Findo. Findo builds a knowledge graph of your contacts, places, events, files, meeting recaps, invoices and other objects using AI and Semantic technologies. Findo understands the way you think, and it learns. Get more done, don't waste hours recalling keywords; c) Collaborate effectively with FindoBot - You just finished a project and realized that your colleague has completed a similar project. Don't waste time redoing something that has already been done. Collaborate effectively. Findo allows you to search through shared locations. And more. Findo is fully integrated inside Facebook Messenger, Slack, Telegram and Skype through intelligent FindoBot. Findo delivers search results right into the messenger, so you can concentrate on your work. Meet your deadlines to get the job done; d) Share Quickly - Your boss has a meeting with a client and needs to access a contract that is in a folder in one of your email accounts or Dropbox or Google Drive? You can't afford to make a mistake. Findo will find that contract in seconds and will allow you to share it without having to switch between applications. Have a better professional image. Timing is everything; e) Search on the go - Decisions are made today when you are not sitting at your desk. You are walking down the street. Your phone starts vibrating. It's your client who is asking for a quote that was done 2 months ago. You need to get that information, now! Findo allows you to «access to your information everywhere». Gain more clients, be confident that your data does not require excessive time to find it; and f) Security - Our top priority is the security of your data. We work diligently to protect your data starting with a secure login process, strong TLS and AES-256 bit data encryption. Our team follows the highest standards of engineering practices and employs state-of-the-art methodologies, tools and cloud services to build and maintain Findo. You can rest assured that we have implemented multiple levels of security to protect your data. This will be added to Bot Research Subject Tracer™. ## Pencil

<https://github.com/evolus/pencil>

Pencil V3 is a rewrite of Pencil that aims to fix major performance and scalability issues of the application. The new version is under heavy development and we are expecting GA builds in June. The following list summarizes important changes in the new version: a) Pencil V3 uses Electron instead of Mozilla XULRunner as the runtime. We expect that by moving into this Nodejs-based environment, the Pencil source code can be much easier for all fellow developers to play with. The fact that Mozilla XULRunner is outdated is also a reason for the movement; b) A new, zip-based file format was introduced to support large documents and better embedding of external bitmaps/resources; c) A new mechanism for page management that dramatically reduces memory usage for large documents; d) Document pages can now be structured into a tree-like model; e) Custom fonts can now be embedded into Pencil .epz documents; f) Printing and PDF export will be improved to support all platforms and with many options; and g) New UI approach. ### REF_N_WRITE - Lookup and Learn

<http://www.ref-n-write.com/>

Features include: 1) Improve Your Writing By Imitative Learning - It has been discovered that one of the effective methods to improve writing skills is to practice imitative learning, where one looks up for statements of similar style, type and tone from previous documents and inherits some aspects into their writing. REF-N-WRITE provides a perfect platform for practicing imitative learning. Just drag-and-drop high quality documents and lookup for subject specific vocabulary and language ideas while you write; 2) 20,000 Academic Phrases and Templates - REF-N-WRITE has an academic phrase bank containing 20,000 frequently used academic/scientific phrases and templates. Non-native English speakers and international students will find this resource very useful to improve their academic writing skills. Native English speakers will find this resource very handy to paraphrase their text; 3) Text Recycling and Reuse - Self Plagiarism - Why write from scratch when you have already written something similar before? Just import your previous documents into REF-N-WRITE, and recycle your text and save time. Check for self-plagiarism in REF-N-WRITE after recycling to avoid academic misconduct; 4) Personal Search Engine for Microsoft Word - ust drag and drop your personal files from your computer, shared network drive or cloud. ### Ariadne <http://www.ariadne-eu.org/>

ARIADNE is a programme funded by the European Commission. It exists since February 2013. It is a proposal to integrate existing archeological data infrastructure across Europe, so researchers can use the various distributed datasets and new technologies to explore research methodologies. The ARIADNE portal was officially launched in Oslo. It's an extremely simple interface that has a keywords search, a browse function and so on. This programme combines and integrates existing archaeological research data infrastructures. We believe that researchers can now use different datasets in their efforts to research archeological discoveries with the help of a new methodology and a new and powerful technology. Seeing how more and more individuals and institutions are using information technologies, we adapted this trend to our archeological field, leading to a large availability of digital datasets, spanning different periods, domains and regions. More and more are getting created. The accumulated outcome of individuals, researchers, institutions and teams leads to a more effective and efficient result. We believe that this practice was hindered by previous methodologies and that a new practice had to be adopted. This non-homogenous group's access to resources had to have fewer constraints. ### The Kepler Project

<https://kepler-project.org/>

The Kepler Project is dedicated to furthering and supporting the capabilities, use, and awareness of the free and open source, scientific workflow application, Kepler. Kepler is designed to help scientists, analysts, and computer programmers create, execute, and share models and analyses across a broad range of scientific and engineering disciplines. Kepler can operate on data stored in a variety of formats, locally and over the internet, and is an effective environment for integrating disparate software components, such as merging "R" scripts with compiled "C" code, or facilitating remote, distributed execution of models. Using Kepler's graphical user interface, users simply select and then connect pertinent analytical components and data sources to create a "scientific workflow"—an executable representation of the steps required to generate results. The Kepler software helps users share and reuse data, workflows, and components developed by the scientific community to address common needs. The Kepler software is developed and maintained by the cross-project Kepler collaboration, which is led by a team consisting of several of the key institutions that originated the project: UC Davis, UC Santa Barbara, and UC San Diego. Primary responsibility for achieving the goals of the Kepler Project reside with the Leadership Team, which works to assure the long-term technical and financial viability of Kepler by making strategic decisions on behalf of the Kepler user community, as well as providing an official and durable point-of-contact to articulate and represent the interests of the Kepler Project and the Kepler software application. Details about how to get more involved with the Kepler Project can be found in the developer section of this website. Kepler is a java-based application that is maintained for the Windows, OSX, and Linux operating systems. The Kepler Project supports the official code-base for Kepler development, as well as provides materials and mechanisms for learning how to use Kepler, sharing experiences with other workflow developers, reporting bugs, suggesting enhancements, etc. This will be added to Biological Informatics Subject Tracer™. ## OpenAIRE-Advance

<https://www.openaire.eu/advance>

OpenAIRE-Advance continues the mission of OpenAIRE to support the Open Access/Open Data mandates in Europe. By sustaining the current successful infrastructure, comprised of a human network and robust technical services, it consolidates its achievements while working to shift the momentum among its communities to Open Science, aiming to be a trusted e-Infrastructure within the realms of the European Open Science Cloud. In this next phase, OpenAIRE-Advance strives to empower its National Open Access Desks (NOADs) so they become a pivotal part within their own national data infrastructures, positioning OA and open science onto national agendas. The capacity building activities bring together experts on topical task groups in thematic areas (open policies, RDM, legal issues, TDM), promoting a train the trainer approach, strengthening and expanding the pan-European Helpdesk with support and training toolkits, training resources and workshops. It examines key elements of scholarly communication, i.e., co-operative OA publishing and next generation repositories, to develop essential building blocks of the scholarly commons. On the technical level OpenAIRE-Advance focuses on the operation and maintenance of the OpenAIRE technical TRL8/9 services, and radically improves the OpenAIRE services on offer by: a) optimizing their performance and scalability, b) refining their functionality based on end-user feedback, c) repackaging them into products, taking a professional marketing approach with well-defined KPIs, d) consolidating the range of services/products into a common e-Infra catalogue to enable a wider uptake. OpenAIRE Advance steps up its outreach activities with concrete pilots with three major RIs, citizen science initiatives, and innovators via a rigorous Open Innovation programme. Finally, via its partnership with COAR, OpenAIRE-Advance consolidates OpenAIRE's global role extending its collaborations with Latin America, US, Japan, Canada, and Africa. ## Distill - Dedicated To Clear Explanations of Machine Learning

<https://distill.pub/>

Machine Learning Research Should Be Clear, Dynamic and Vivid. Distill Is Here to Help. Features include: a) A modern medium for presenting research - The web is a powerful medium to share new ways of thinking. Over the last few years we've seen many imaginative examples of such work. But traditional academic publishing remains focused on the PDF, which prevents this sort of communication; b) New ways of thinking enable new discoveries - New notations, visualizations, and mental models can deepen our understanding. By nurturing the development of such new ways of thinking, Distill will enable new discoveries; c) Machine learning needs more transparency - Machine learning will fundamentally change how humans and computers interact. It's important to make those techniques transparent, so we can understand and safely control how they work. Distill will provide a platform for vividly illustrating these ideas; d) Legitimacy for non-traditional research artifacts - Many researchers want to do work that is not easily contained within a PDF, but can't get the support they need to pursue it. We, as the research community, are failing them by not treating these wonderful, non-traditional research artifacts as "real" academic contributions; and e) Clear writing benefits everyone - When we rush papers out the door to meet conference deadlines, something suffers — often it is the readability and clarity of our communication. This can add severe drag to the entire community as our readers struggle to understand our ideas. We think this "research debt" can be avoided. ### Surf Canyon Search Engine

<http://www.surfcanyon.com/>

As the quantity of information on the internet expands exponentially, it has become increasingly difficult, if not impossible, for search engines to provide all the relevant results on page one, while simultaneously eliminating those that are irrelevant. It is furthermore of little use providing millions of matched documents when few people bother expending the effort to dig past the first page of results. To address these problems, Surf Canyon has invented Dynamic Search, a real-time contextual search technology that observes user behavior in order to disambiguate intent "on the fly," and then automatically bring forward to page one relevant results that might otherwise have remain buried. By transforming traditional static lists of links into dynamic search pages where results are immediately re-ordered, users are able to more quickly and easily find pertinent information buried among the irrelevant results, significantly accelerating the search process. This patented technology is available at our search site. The company was founded in 2006 and is headquartered in San Francisco, CA. In 2015, Surf Canyon was re-branded to Rank Dynamics. ### BEN Portal: BioSciEdNet

www.bioscienednet.org/portal

Originally featured in the 01-18-2013 Scout Report, we've decided to re-feature the BEN Portal: a project of the American Association for the Advancement of Science (AAAS). For almost two decades the BEN Portal, which stands for BiosciEdNet, has sought to provide "seamless access to e-resources, but to also serve as a catalyst for strengthening teaching and learning in the biological sciences." Today, the BEN Portal (which has also been affiliated with the National Science Digital Library since 2005) features publications from over thirty organizations, including the AAAS, the American Physiological Society, the Biotechnology Institute, the Howard Hughes Medical Institute, and much more. Visitors are invited to conduct a text search in this collection or browse materials by subject. In addition, educators can browse teaching strategies by classroom level (K-12 educators; college faculty). The BEN Portal features both free resources and resources that require a subscription: users have the option to limit search results to free resources. <https://www.wikihow.com/> wikiHow is a worldwide collaboration of thousands of people focused on one goal: teaching anyone in the world how to do anything. Everything you read on wikiHow was written by someone who wanted to help someone else. They are in 17 languages, including: Arabic, Chinese, Czech, Dutch, English, French, German, Hindi, Indonesian, Italian, Japanese, Korean, Portuguese, Russian, Spanish, Thai, and Vietnamese with more in the works. So useful that Facebook and dozens of mobile phone companies selected wikiHow as a free basic service in 42 countries. In those countries, you can use wikiHow without data charges. They freely share our open source software. Our text content is Creative Commons licensed. Comscore ranks wikiHow in the top 150 most visited publishers in the world. ### WatchKnowLearn - Free Organized Educational Videos

<http://www.watchknowlearn.org/>

The Vision behind WatchKnowLearn is simple: To provide a world-class, online domain on which educators can store, categorize, and rate the best, K – 12 educational videos on the Internet today. And to make this service FREE so teachers, parents and students everywhere may have access to those videos. To make this a reality, they invite teachers, instructors and educators to suggest videos for inclusion into our directory, and then to review, approve, and assign those videos into appropriate categories using a wiki framework and philosophy. The videos are the highest quality found on the Internet, cover all major educational topics from elementary to secondary schools (or age range 1 – 18), and are Kid Safe because they are vetted by teachers. WatchKnowLearn has indexed approximately 50,000 educational videos, placing them into a directory of over 5,000 categories. The videos are available without any registration or fees to teachers in the classroom, as well as parents and students at home 24/7. Users can dive into our innovative directory or search for videos by subject and age level. Video titles, descriptions, age level information, and ratings are all edited for usefulness. Our Web site invites broad participation in a new kind of wiki system, guided by teachers. WatchKnowLearn does not itself host videos—we serve as a library for links to excellent educational videos that have been selected by educators. ### 12Manage - The Executive Fast Track

<https://www.12manage.com/>

12manage is a knowledge network for managers, specialists and academics about management. The members of this network are mostly senior managers (60%), as well as management specialists (20%) and management academics (20%). Their knowledge centers are referenced by ± 1,000,000 members. 12manage provides for each management method, model or concept: a concise description, its history, calculation, usage and application, process steps, strengths and benefits, limitations and disadvantages, assumptions and conditions, references, as well as an interactive user forum. Premium users have additional access to expert tips, resources, news and videos for each method. Their explanations focus on concepts that are both scientifically accepted and applicable in management practice. All management knowledge centers are classified into 12 management disciplines: Change & Organization, Communication & Skills, Decision-making & Valuation, Ethics & Responsibility, Finance & Investing, Human Resources, Knowledge & Intangibles, Leadership, Marketing, Program & Project Management, Strategy and Supply Chain & Quality. All management disciplines and knowledge centers are available in English, plus the following 12 languages: Arabic, Chinese, Dutch, French, German, Italian, Japanese, Korean, Portuguese, Russian, Spanish and Swedish. 12manage also provides a Management Dictionary with 2000 entries, Management Issues, a Management Start Page, useful Management Links and access to various education programs, such as Executive MBA, Executive Education, MBA Programs, and other Master Programs. We distribute a weekly newsletter. 12manage members can participate in our SIGs, allowing to network and exchange information with peers all over the world. Find the most popular questions asked across hundreds of thousands of forums, Amazon, Reddit, Quora and Q&A sites for any keyword. Perfect for researching customer questions, generating content ideas and monitoring questions about topics and brands. Features include: a) Create content that answers the most asked questions - Enter a topic or brand name and instantly see the questions that real people are asking. Results are automatically filtered to clearly display the most frequently asked questions first. Write answers with confidence, knowing they will resonate with your audience; b) Social listening - Find questions in the forums and subreddits your audience uses the most. Questions are sorted by popularity, so you will quickly identify highly relevant topics for targeted audience segments. Going directly to these sources let's you gain greater understanding of your audience's most pressing needs; c) Brand monitoring - Understand how people are talking about your brand. Increase your customers' confidence by responding to their questions outside of your own channels and by dispelling misinformation or providing context when needed. Monitor competitors' brands to identify key product differentiators; d) E-commerce - Provide descriptions that answer common product-related questions. Seeing actual questions about your own product helps to identify gaps in your descriptions before they lead to lost sales; and f) Product Development - Product developers and designers can use the Question Analyzer to conduct research product questions quickly and at scale. <https://mty.ai/blog/the-ai-glossary-a-data-scientists-no-fluff-explanations-for-key-ai-concepts/>

As a data scientist at an AI company, his colleagues are as tired of the hyperbole and conflicting information in the space as you are. It seems like everyone’s got their own definition for the AI buzzword du jour, and it’s leading to a lot of contradictions and confusion—and that’s not helpful for anyone. There have been a few noble attempts from academics, tech journalists, other AI companies, and fellow data scientists at simplifying industry concepts and laying some groundwork on key terms for us all to agree on. But he has found them either still too marketing-y or so rambling they leave your head spinning. This will be added to Artificial Intelligence Resources Subject Tracer™. ### OnionShare - Securely and Anonymously Share Files of Any Size

<https://onionshare.org/>

OnionShare lets you securely and anonymously share files of any size. It works by starting a web server, making it accessible as a Tor Onion Service, and generating an unguessable URL to access and download the files. It does not require setting up a separate server or using a third party file-sharing service. You host the files on your own computer and use a Tor Onion Service to make it temporarily accessible over the internet. The receiving user just needs to open the URL in Tor Browser to download the file. This will be added to Privacy Resources Subject Tracer™. ### etherpad - Collaborating In Really Real-Time

<http://etherpad.org/>

No more sending your stuff back and forth via email, just set up a pad, share the link and start collaborating! Etherpad allows you to edit documents collaboratively in real-time, much like a live multi-player editor that runs in your browser. Write articles, press releases, to-do lists, etc. together with your friends, fellow students or colleagues, all working on the same document at the same time. All instances provide access to all data through a well-documented API and supports import/export to many major data exchange formats. And if the built-in feature set isn't enough for you, there's tons of plugins that allow you to customize your instance to suit your needs. You don't need to set up a server and install Etherpad in order to use it. Just pick one of publicly available instances that friendly people from everywhere around the world have set up. Alternatively, you can set up your own instance by following their installation guide. This will be added to Privacy Resources Subject Tracer™. ## Obin - Client Side Encrypted PasteBin

<https://Obin.net/>

A random key is generated and used to encrypt the paste, thanks to the sjcl JavaScript library. The encrypted content is then sent to the server, which returns the address of the newly created paste. The JavaScript code redirects to this address, but it adds the encryption key in the URL hash (#). When somebody wants to read the paste, they will usually click on a link with this URL. If the hash containing the key is a part of it, Obin's JavaScript will use it to decrypt the content sent by the server. The browser never sends the hash to the server, so the latter does not receive the key at any time. All pastes are AES256 encrypted, they cannot know what you paste... ## KeePassX - Cross Platform Password Manager

<https://www.keepassx.org/>

KeePassX is an application for people with extremely high demands on secure personal data management. It has a light interface, is cross platform and published under the terms of the GNU General Public License. KeePassX saves many different information e.g. user names, passwords, urls, attachments and comments in one single database. For a better management user-defined titles and icons can be specified for each single entry. Furthermore the entries are sorted in groups, which are customizable as well. The integrated search function allows to search in a single group or the complete database. KeePassX offers a little utility for secure password generation. The password generator is very customizable, fast and easy to use. Especially someone who generates passwords frequently will appreciate this feature. The complete database is always encrypted either with AES (alias Rijndael) or Twofish encryption algorithm using a 256 bit key. Therefore the saved information can be considered as quite safe. KeePassX uses a database format that is compatible with KeePass Password Safe. This makes the use of that application even more favourable. Originally KeePassX was called KeePass/L for Linux since it was a port of Windows password manager KeePass Password Safe. After KeePass/L became a cross platform application the name was not appropriate anymore and therefore, on 22 March 2006 it has been changed. ### AES Crypt - Advanced Open Source File Encryption

<https://www.aescrypt.com/>

AES Crypt is a file encryption software available on several operating systems that uses the industry standard Advanced Encryption Standard (AES) to easily and securely encrypt files. You do not need to be an expert to use AES Crypt, nor do you need to understand cryptography. When using Windows, the only thing you need to do is right-click on a file, select AES Encrypt or AES Decrypt, enter a password, and AES Crypt will do the rest. On a Mac, you can drag a file to the AES Crypt program and provide the required password. On the command line, one can execute the "aescrypt" command with name of the file and password to use to encrypt or decrypt. For PHP, Java, and C# developers, there are libraries available that can read and write AES-encrypted files from within your application. For Python enthusiasts, there is a command-line utility with source code that can be used to integrate AES Crypt functionality into your own Python applications. Using a powerful 256-bit encryption algorithm, AES Crypt can safely secure your most sensitive files. Once a file is encrypted, you do not have to worry about a person reading your sensitive information, as an encrypted file is completely useless without the password. It simply cannot be read. AES Crypt is the perfect tool for anyone who carries sensitive information with them while traveling, uploads sensitive files to servers on the Internet, or wishes to protect sensitive information from being stolen from the home or office. AES Crypt is also the perfect solution for those who wish to backup information and store that data at a bank, in a cloud-based storage service, and any place where sensitive files might be accessible by someone else. Best of all, AES Crypt is completely free open source software. This will be added to Privacy Resources Subject Tracer™. ### Depsy - Value Software That Powers Science

<http://depsy.org/>

Depsy helps build the software-intensive science of the future by promoting credit for software as a fundamental building block of science. Features include: 1) Credit when software is informally cited - Depsy text-mines papers to find fulltext mentions of software they use, revealing impacts invisible to citation indexes like Google Scholar; 2) Credit when software is reused - Citation is just part of the story—Depsy analyzes code from over half a million GitHub repositories to find how packages are reused by other software projects; and 3) Credit for all software's authors - Depsy assigns fractional credit to contributors based on designated authorship, number of commits, and repo ownership—supporting a fairer, more software-native reward system. ## Chromium - Open-source Web Browser Project

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Chromium\_\(web\_browser\))

Chromium is an open-source Web browser project started by Google, to provide the source code for the proprietary Google Chrome browser.[5] The two browsers share the majority of code and features, though there are some minor differences in features and logos, and they have different licensing. The Chromium Project takes its name from the element chromium, the metal from which chrome plating is made.[6] Google's intention, as expressed in the developer documentation, was that Chromium would be the name of the open-source development project and that the final product's name would be Chrome;[7] however, other developers have taken the Chromium code and released versions under the Chromium name. One of the major aims of the project is for Chromium to be a tabbed window manager, or shell for the Web, as opposed to it being a traditional browser application. The application is designed to have a minimalist user interface. The developers state that it "should feel lightweight (cognitively and physically) and fast". To find out more information about our hometown, Vik, please check out Torstein's personal website. While the bulk of our growing team is located in Norway, the international nature of our business has lead us to recruit talent and forge partnerships across every continent. Our best selling product, Highcharts, started out as Torstein's humble quest for a simple charting tool for updating his homepage with snow depth measurements from Vikjafjellet, the local mountain where his family keeps a cabin. Frustrated with the common flash plug-ins, and other proprietary solutions at the time, he decided to build a standards-based solution of his own, and share it with the world. It turns out he was doing more than scratching his own itch. Since its launch in 2009, Highcharts has remained the premier and fastest growing charting-tool in a competitive market. ### Dia - GTK+ Based Diagram Creation Program

<https://wiki.gnome.org/Apps/Dia>

Dia's new homepage. Dia is a GTK+ based diagram creation program for GNU/Linux, MacOS X, Unix, and Windows, and is released under the GPL license. Dia is roughly inspired by the commercial Windows program 'Visio,' though more geared towards informal diagrams for casual use. It can be used to draw many different kinds of diagrams. It currently has special objects to help draw entity relationship diagrams, UML diagrams, flowcharts, network diagrams, and many other diagrams. It is also possible to add support for new shapes by writing simple XML files, using a subset of SVG to draw the shape. It can load and save diagrams to a custom XML format (gzipped by default, to save space), can export diagrams to a number of formats, including EPS, SVG, XFIG, WMF and PNG, and can print diagrams (including ones that span multiple pages). ## Awarenesswatch™ Paper Review

Antirival Goods, Network Effects and the Sharing Economy by F.

Xavier Olleros

<http://firstmonday.org/ojs/index.php/fm/article/view/8161>

Abstract:

Nothing facilitates large-scale collaboration like the prospect of inclusive, all-win games. Modern humans have gotten much better at large-scale collaboration because they have discovered, or invented, a broad range of collective goods that are easy to share and become more valuable the more they are shared, thus multiplying the opportunities for all-win outcomes. Steven Weber (2004) and Mark Cooper (2006a, 2006b) have drawn our attention to 'antirival goods' — subject to increasing returns to shared use — to differentiate them from 'rival goods' — subject to decreasing returns to shared use — and 'nonrival goods' — subject to constant returns to shared use. Unlike Weber and Cooper, I argue that nonrivalness and antirivalness are orthogonal properties of some collective goods, rather than stages along the same continuum away from rivalness. Collective goods, I also argue, are most inclusive when they are both nonrival and antirival. In an economy rich in both nonrival and antirival goods, the collaborative stance will often be the default collective choice, at large and small scales alike. Digital technologies are ushering in a transformative age as they expand the cornucopia of nonrival and antirival goods available to us. This inclusiveness of many digital goods eliminates the free-riding problem and mobilizes large amounts of volunteer work.

Subject Tracer™ Information Blogs

Subject Tracer™ Information Blogs created and developed by the Virtual Private Library™ combine the best of the latest tools on the Internet. Using bots, blogs and news aggregators the Subject Tracer™ Information blogs generate RSS feeds with the latest resources to create a current information resource flow through niched subject tracers. I am proud to be the creator of the Internet's first Subject Tracer™ Information Blogs:
