Competitive Intelligence – A Selective Resource Guide – Updated January 2020

<https://www.llrx.com/archives/subject/competitive-intelligence-a-selective-resource-guide/>

This guide on competitive intelligence resources was first published in 2005, and Sabrina I. Pacifici has continued to update it regularly over the past 14 years. It is a comprehensive current awareness guide that focuses on identifying a selective but wide range of reliable, topical, predominantly free websites and resources to support effective legal research. The scope includes internet search, discovery, monitoring, analyzing and reviewing current and historical data, news, reports, statistics and profiles on companies, markets, countries, people and issues, from a national and a global perspective. Sabrina's guide is a "Best of the Web" resource that encompasses search engines, portals, government sponsored and open source databases, news and topical alerts, data archives, as well as academic, corporate and publisher specific services and applications. Her recommendations are accompanied by links to trusted and targeted content and sources produced by reputable media and publishing companies, business, government, academe, IGOs and NGOs, and expert legal and technology professionals. This competitive intelligence guide maintains focus on the requirements of multi-disciplinary subject matter researchers. This latest version includes dozens of updated links, deletion of sites that no longer exist, as well as numerous new sites with value added content. For 24 years, LLRX has not changed its URL and the webzine remains an independent, non-affiliated, one woman owned and edited publication. Please refer to this guide as a reliable resource on which you may depend and to which I hope you will refer as you engage in research, knowledge discovery, managing knowledge services, and as a reliable resource for teaching and training programs. As always, I appreciate your suggestions to include additional sites and sources in this guide. Thank you – and may your research always shine light on the facts, regardless of efforts to bury, obscure or diminish them. This will be added to Business Intelligence Resources Subject Tracer™. Awarenesswatch™ Paper Review

Digital Nomads, Coworking, and Other Expressions of Mobile Work on Twitter by Jeff Hemsley, Ingrid Erickson, Mohammad Hassein Jarrahi, and Amir Karami

Abstract:

We analyze a set of Twitter hashtags to ascertain how contemporary parlance in social media can illuminate the rich cultural intersections between modern forms of work, use of technology, and physical mobility. We use network word co-occurrence analysis and topic modeling to reveal several thematic areas of discourse present in Twitter, each with its own affiliated terms and distinctive emphases. The first theme centers on worker identity and is currently dominated by the experiences of digital nomads. The second theme focuses on the practicalities of working in a physical location and is currently dominated by issues related to co-working spaces. Finally, the third theme is a loose and speculative set of ideas around the evolution of work in the future, predicting how enterprises may have to adapt to new ways of working. Our contribution is twofold. First, we contribute to scholarship on social media methods by showing how a robust analysis of Twitter data can help scholars find subthematic nuance within a complex discussion space by identifying the existence and boundaries of topical sub-themes. Second, we contribute to scholarship on the future of work by providing empirical evidence for the ways that the myriad terms related to mobility and work relate to one another and, most importantly, how these relations signal semantic centrality among those who share their thoughts on these types of work.
