Mega Secure Cloud Storage and Communication

<https://mega.nz/>

MEGA was architected around the simple fact that cryptography, for it to be accepted and used, must not interfere with usability. MEGA is fully accessible without prior software installs and remains the only cloud storage provider with browser-based high-performance end-to-end encryption. The only visible signs of the crypto layer operating under MEGA's hood are the entropy collection during signup, the lack of a password reset feature and the novel (and browser-specific) ways file transfers are conducted. Today, millions of business and personal users rely on MEGA to securely and reliably store and serve petabytes of data and they believe that this success is the result of MEGA's low barrier to entry to a more secure cloud. Business Formation Statistics (BFS)

<https://www.census.gov/programs-surveys/bfs.html>

The Business Formation Statistics (BFS) are a product of the U.S. Census Bureau developed in research collaboration with economists affiliated with Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta, University of Maryland, and University of Notre Dame. The current BFS is released as a research product in “beta” form. A final version is in the research and development phase. The Business Formation Statistics (BFS) provide timely and high frequency data on: a) Business applications as indicated by applications for an Employer Identification Number (EIN); b) Actual and projected business formations originating from business applications based on the record of first payroll tax liability for an EIN; and c) Delay in business formation as indicated by the average duration between business application and business formation. The BFS data cover: 1) The period starting from the third quarter of 2004 (2004q3) at a quarterly frequency; and 2) The United States - nationwide and individual states. Who bypasses the Great Firewall in China? by Chong Zhang

<https://firstmonday.org/ojs/index.php/fm/article/view/10256>

Abstract:

The blockage of foreign Web sites, which is often called the “Great Firewall (GFW)”, serves an important part of the Internet censorship in mainland China. This study investigated the inequality of bypassing the GFW in mainland China, and the possible difference in some “capital-enhancing” uses of the Internet (using the Internet for work, learning and political expression) between GFW-bypassing netizens and those still suffer from strict Internet censorship. This study used data from the China Family Panel Studies (CFPS). Although there is no direct measurement of netizens’ GFW bypassing, a variable measuring the ownership of Facebook accounts was used as a proxy of the status of GFW bypassing. Firstly, the results of bivariate analyses and multiple correspondence analysis (MCA) suggest that mainland Chinese netizens who can bypass Internet censorship and access blocked foreign Web sites are more socio-economically better off (higher social class, well-educated and urban residing) and younger. Moreover, the results of ordinary least squares (OLS) regression and logistic regression models tell that in general bypassing the GFW is related to more activeness in using the Internet for learning and political expression. After controlling socio-economic and demographic characteristics, GFW bypassing is no longer found to be related to online learning, but is still related to an expression of political views online.
