V7N10

October 2009

Welcome to the V7N10 October 2009 issue of the Awareness Watch™ Newsletter. This newsletter is available as a complimentary subscription and will be issued monthly. Each newsletter will feature the following:

Awareness Watch™ Featured Report
Awareness Watch™ Spotters
Awareness Watch™ Book/Paper/Article Review
Subject Tracer™ Information Blogs

I am always open to feedback from readers so please feel free to email with all suggestions, reviews and new resources that you feel would be appropriate for inclusion in an upcoming issue of Awareness Watch™. This is an ongoing work of creativity and you will be observing constant changes, constant updates knowing that “change” is the only thing that will remain constant!!

Awareness Watch™ Featured Report

This month's featured report will be highlighting Entrepreneurial and Intrapreneurial Resources with the Subject Tracers located at the Virtual Private Library and accessible online at the following URL:

<http://www.EntrepreneurialResources.info/>

<http://www.IntrapreneurialResources.info/>

In today's New Economy environment we must have all the available resources at hand and the Internet offers a plethora of excellent resources for both the Entrepreneur as well as the Intrapreneur! These resources will keep you on the correct and positive path for the knowledge discovery required to fulfill your business mission and goals.

Mind42.com - Collaborative Mind Mapping In Your Browser

<http://www.Mind42.com/>

In Mind42, 42 is not only the answer to Life, the Universe, and Everything! 42 means FOR TWO and indicates the collaborative character of mind42, because that is exactly what mind42 is: A collaborative browser-based online mind mapping tool. It allows you to manage all your ideas, whether alone, twosome or working together with the whole world. As mind42 runs inside the browser, installing mind mapping tools is no longer needed - for a hassle-free mindmapping experience. Just open the browser and launch the application when needed - it behaves like a classical desktop application! Mind42 is a web application - however, this doesn't mean you have to set your comfort aside. Mind42 is a WYSIWYG (What You See Is What You Get) mind map editor supporting keyboard shortcuts, drag and drop, zooming and much more. No forms and lists which are generally used in web application. A real application - within your browser. This has been added to the tools section of Research Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog.

CorrectMyText.com – Native Speakers Will Check Your Text In a Foreign Language

<http://www.correctmytext.com/>

Learning to write and speak a foreign language correctly requires having somebody to correct your grammar and usage errors. Otherwise you may learn a substandard version of the language with deep-rooter mistakes and incorrect usages that are hard to get rid of. A popular and tried-and-true way to learn languages involves writing texts in a foreign language on a daily basis and reading them aloud to a native speaker, who will correct any mistakes. Their project, www.correctmytext.com, offers an absolutely free way for native speakers of different languages to share their knowledge. The website interface currently supports ten of the most widely used languages: English, German, French, Spanish, Portuguese, Italian, Russian, Chinese, Korean, and Japanese. If you are learning any of these languages, feel free to register and upload any text of yours that you need corrected. Native speakers or language professionals will review your text and correct all errors of style or grammar free of charge. You can also request a sound recording of the spoken version of your corrected text that will let you hear the subtleties of pronunciation by a native speaker. The website offers opportunities to meet and communicate with native speakers via internal mail. This has been added to the tools section of Research Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog. In particular, emphasis will be given to:

- * Genomic and proteomic profiling
- * Genetics and drug metabolism
- * Targeted drug identification and discovery
- * Drug selection & dosage based on patient's genetic profile
- * Related morbidity & mortality intervention
- * Advanced disease screening and targeted therapeutic intervention
- * Genetic based vaccine development
- * Satisfaction and preference
- * Health economic evaluations
- * Practical and organizational issues in the development and implementation of personalized medicine programs

TrueCrypt - Free Open Source On the Fly Disk Encryption Software

<http://www.truecrypt.org/>

Free open-source disk encryption software for Windows Vista/XP, Mac OS X, and Linux
Main features include: 1) Creates a virtual encrypted disk within a file and mounts it as a real disk; 2) Encrypts an entire partition or storage device such as USB flash drive or hard drive; 3) Encrypts a partition or drive where Windows is installed (pre-boot authentication); 4) Encryption is automatic, real-time (on-the-fly) and transparent; 5) Parallelization and pipelining allow data to be read and written as fast as if the drive was not encrypted; 6) Provides plausible deniability, in case an adversary forces you to reveal the password: Hidden volume (steganography) and hidden operating system; and 7) Encryption algorithms: AES-256, Serpent, and Twofish. Mode of operation: XTS. Further information regarding features of the software may be found in the documentation. National Science Library, Chinese Academy of Sciences (NSLC)

http://www.las.ac.cn/las_en/

The National Science Library, Chinese Academy of Sciences (NSLC) is the public library service system of CAS as well as the National Library of Sciences in Chinese National Science and Technology Libraries (NSTL) system. Under a Board Trustees appointed by CAS, NSLC consists of a Main Library (based in Beijing, formerly the Library of CAS) and three branch libraries, respectively Lanzhou Branch Library (formerly Lanzhou Library of CAS), Chengdu Branch Library (formerly Chengdu Library of CAS), and Wuhan Branch Library (formerly Wuhan Library of CAS). NSLC also co-operates, together with selected CAS research institutes, a number of special branch libraries whom will provide specialized information resources and services. NSLC functions as the key library nationally for collecting information resources and providing information services in natural sciences, inter-disciplinary fields, and high tech fields, for the researchers and students of CAS and for the researchers around the country. It also conducts services such as information analysis, digital library system development, scientific publication (with its 14 journals), and promotion of sciences. It also operates the Archives of CAS. NSLC has a staff over 470, building areas more than 80,000m², and a collection about 11.5 million items. Recent years it has acquired or developed more than 30 databases, covering over 5000 foreign STM full text journals,

The official journal of the International Association for Cereal Science and Technology (ICC) in cooperation with MoniQA. Quality Assurance and Safety of Crops and Foods is an international peer-reviewed journal publishing scientific primary research papers and review papers in the areas of cereals, grain crops, their quality and issues relating to food safety. It will focus on:

- * The research into and development of new analytical tools
- * The improvement of existing analytical tools
- * Assuring quality and safety
- * Ensuring traceability and authenticity
- * Contributions to food security
- * The technologies associated with harvesting, storing, processing and manufacture

The scope of publications will extend to cover relevant issues encompassed by:

- * Regulatory matters
- * Socio-economic impacts
- * Globalisation
- * Trade agreements
- * Activities of international organisations and agreements

This journal will publish research papers from around the globe with the major focus on the research and developments of new analytical tools methods and equipment and the improvement of existing tools for assuring the quality and safety of cereals, crops and derived foods and feeds, refined products and ingredients; to ensure traceability and authenticity; to contribute to food security; and to describe the technologies associated with harvesting, storing, processing and manufacturing of crops and foods, feeds, ingredients and other refined products. The scope of publications will also cover other disciplines related to food and feed quality and safety, such as legal requirements, regulations, socio-economic impact, globalisation and trade, food security, international organisations and agreements. This has been added to Agriculture Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog.

EMBO Molecular Medicine

<http://www3.interscience.wiley.com/journal/120756871/home>

Molecular Medicine is a rapidly-growing area of research at the interface between clinical research and basic biology. Powerful new analytical tools provided by molecular biology allow unprecedented insights into human physiology and the molecular basis of diseases. These insights are being translated into better diagnosis, prevention and patient care. EMBO Molecular Medicine is a peer-reviewed journal. It is dedicated to the publication of the results of original, cutting-edge research in the field of Molecular Medicine and will be of interest to medical and basic scientists. It will give priority to those articles that provide novel and relevant molecular insight into the cellular and systemic processes that underlie defined human diseases and that offer new perspectives for clinical application at the levels of diagnosis, prevention, treatment and/or therapy. The Journal publishes research articles and reviews relevant to all fields of clinical medicine and their related research areas in basic biology. Studies based on model organisms also fall within the scope of the journal, provided that the results presented are evidently and directly relevant to human disease.

RiotFeeds - Discover the Freshest Information On Your Favorite Topics Using Your Twitter Account

<http://live.oneriot.com/riotfeeds/>

RiotFeeds are a new way to track the web's freshest buzz on your favorite topics using your Twitter account. By delivering today's most popular stories through a single source, RiotFeeds offer a simple alternative to scouring the web for the best new content: they do it for you. Each RiotFeed combines a hand-curated selection of the Internet's best websites, dishing out only the juiciest news, stories and videos from each. This filtering is supported by OneRiot's PulseRank, a realtime ranking algorithm that determines a webpage's social relevance in seconds. OneRiot, a realtime search engine, helps users find the news, blogs and videos that people are buzzing about. OneRiot ranks its search results using PulseRank, a realtime ranking algorithm that sorts web content according to its current social significance. By indexing pages shared by millions of Digg, Twitter, and wider social web users - including the contributions of OneRiot's own three million-strong panel - OneRiot delivers fresh, hyper-relevant search results that answer the question: what is happening right now? Live Ships Map - AIS - Vessel Traffic and Positions

<http://www.marinetraffic.com/ais/>

This web site is part of an academic, open, community-based project. It is dedicated in collecting and presenting data which are exploited in research areas, such as: 1) Study of marine telecommunications in respect of efficiency and propagation parameters, 2) Simulation of vessel movements in order to contribute to the safety of navigation and to cope with critical incidents, 3) Interactive information systems design, 4) Design of databases providing real-time information, 5) Statistical processing of ports traffic with applications in operational research, 6) Design of models for the spotting of the origin of a pollution, 7) Design of efficient algorithms for sea path evaluation and for determining the estimated time of ship arrivals, 8) Correlation of the collected information with weather data, and 9) Cooperation with Institutes dedicated in the protection of the environment. It provides free real-time information to the public, about ship movements and ports, mainly across the coast-lines of Europe and N.America. The project is currently hosted by the Department of Product and Systems Design Engineering, University of the Aegean, Greece. Clinical Proteomics

<http://www.springer.com/humana+press/molecular%2C+cell+and+stem+cell+biology/journal/12014>

<http://www.springerlink.com/content/120552/>

As molecular medicine moves beyond genomics to proteomics, the goal becomes the characterization of the cellular circuitry and the understanding of the impact of disease and therapy on cellular networks. Clinical Proteomics provides a scholarly forum for novel scientific research in the field of translational proteomics. The journal places special emphasis on the application of proteomic technology to all aspects of clinical research. A key feature is its commitment to rapid scientific review and timely publication of submitted manuscripts. Coverage includes: Clinical sample collection and handling to preserve proteins; New technology, including protein arrays, mass spectroscopy, microanalytic devices, nanotechnology, and biosensors for protein-based clinical bioassays and clinical chemistry assays; Bioinformatics tools including pattern recognition, artificial intelligence, and computer learning algorithms.

ResearchSEA - Asia Research News

<http://www.researchsea.com/>

ResearchSEA is Asia's first research news portal, a one-stop centre where journalists and members of the public can gain access to news and local experts from the research world in Asia. Promoting public understanding of research encourages long term innovation and growth. The media is key to promoting public understanding. Almost everyone in the world reads newspapers, magazines, websites, watch TV or listen to the radio. The media is the ultimate gateway to the international community and a powerful medium for forging local and international links. ResearchSEA brings research news and top experts direct from universities, think tanks, journals and specialist organisations to journalists around the world. Journalists in over 78 countries use ResearchSEA to find information about the latest research and experts for their newspapers, magazines, radio and television programs. SpeedCine - The Fast Way To Find Legal Movies Online

<http://www.speedcine.com/>

SpeedCine [Speed-Sinny] makes it easy to find legal feature-length movies on your computer. They collect information on films that are available from different sources and put them together in one convenient place. In time they will be comprehensive database of all the feature films that are available for downloading and streaming on the web. SpeedCine only indexes feature-length films--not TV Shows or shorts. They define "feature-length" as being at least 60 minutes long. They don't index training videos, travelogues, or most shorts collections, but they do include many made-for-TV and straight-to-video movies. They do curate the collection to a certain extent. Not every film is included in the A-Z index; some are only accessible through the Search Box. Currently

South Asian Bureau of Economic Research (SABER)

<http://saber.eaber.org/>

The South Asian Bureau of Economic Research (SABER) builds on the success of the East Asian Bureau of Economic Research (EABER) in creating a forum for high-quality economic research focusing on issues facing the economies of South Asia and economic interaction between South and East Asia. It comprises representatives from Bangladesh, India, Nepal, Pakistan, Sri Lanka and Australia. The rapid development of the South Asian economies, the growth of regional and intra-regional trade, financial and other economic interaction, and South Asia's increasing role in the global economy all underline the need for access to a vastly increased range of quality economic analysis on South Asia. SABER, like EABER, is a portal for research on South Asian Economics and houses a collection of research papers from all its member institutes. The Beloit College Mindset List for the Class of 2013

<http://www.beloit.edu/mindset/2013.php>

If the entering college class of 2013 had been more alert back in 1991 when most of them were born, they would now be experiencing a severe case of déjà vu. The headlines that year railed about government interventions, bailouts, bad loans, unemployment and greater regulation of the finance industry. The Tonight Show changed hosts for the first time in decades, and the nation asked “was Iraq worth a war?” Each August since 1998, Beloit College has released the Beloit College Mindset List. It provides a look at the cultural touchstones that shape the lives of students entering college. It is the creation of Beloit’s Keefer Professor of the Humanities Tom McBride and Emeritus Public Affairs Director Ron Nief. It is used around the world as the school year begins, as a reminder of the rapidly changing frame of reference for this new generation. It is widely reprinted and the Mindset List website at <http://www.beloit.edu/mindset/> receives more than 300,000 hits annually. As millions of students head off to college this fall, most will continue to experience the economic anxiety that marked their first two years of life just as it has marked their last two years of high school. Fears of the middle class--including their parents--about retirement and health care have been a part of their lives. Now however, they can turn to technology and text a friend: "Momdad still worried bout stocks. urs 2? PAW PCM". Members of the class of 2013 won't be surprised when they can charge a latté on their cell phone and curl up in the corner to read a textbook on an electronic screen. The migration of once independent media—radio, TV, videos and CDs—to the computer has never amazed them. They have grown up in a politically correct universe in which multi-culturalism has been a given. It is a world organized around globalization, with McDonald's everywhere on the planet. Carter and Reagan are as distant to them as Truman and Eisenhower were to their parents. Tattoos, once thought "lower class," are, to them, quite chic. Everybody knows the news before the evening news comes on. Thus the class of 2013 heads off to college as tolerant, global, and technologically hip...and with another new host of The Tonight Show. Talkinator - Talk Like Crazy

<http://www.talkinator.com/>

Add chat to your web site or profile page in seconds! Just copy and paste the code, and start typing! Simply enter the name of the room in the textbox in the upper left on their page and your talkinator room will be created. How do I sign up? You don't. Talkinator is about speeding up your web experience. With Talkinator, there's no sign-up. For you -or- for the people who visit your talkinator room. Just grab a talkinator and go! Every Talkinator includes a "get-the-code" button. Click that (or click the here). Customize the talkinator for size, color and room name. Paste that code in your site - and you have your very own Talkinator! Share your Talkinator - or keep it a Secret! Want a rousing conversation going on in your website? Then pick a Talkinator room that already exists. Websites can "share" Talkinators. If you and another site have the same Talkinator room, it doesn't matter if you're on that site or your own - you are in the same Talkinator talking away! Of course, if your site is busy enough on its own, then just create your own unique roomname and use that. Or if you want just members of your site allowed in the room, then only show the Talkinator code once one of your members logs in - voila ! Members only room! International Journal of Advanced Manufacturing Technology

<http://www.springer.com/engineering/production+eng/journal/170>

The International Journal of Advanced Manufacturing Technology aims to bridge the gap between pure research journals and the more practical publications on factory automation systems. It therefore provides an outstanding forum for international papers covering applications-based research topics spanning the entire manufacturing spectrum. Published papers will continue to be to a high standard of excellence. This is ensured by subjecting each paper to a strict assessment procedure by members of the international editorial advisory board. The objective is firmly to establish that papers submitted do meet the requirements, especially in the context of proven applications-based research work. It is not acceptable that papers have a theoretical content alone. The journal covers the full range of advanced manufacturing echnology. It therefore publishes papers on robotics; artificial intelligence, including speech technology, vision and tactile sensing; grippers; programmable controllers; lasers and other advanced processes; programmable assembly; flexible manufacturing systems; computer integrated manufacturing; inspection; automatic test equipment; simulation; motors, controls and drives; local area networking; production planning and control; logistics and supply chain management; human factors; and economics.

MyFeedMe - Always On, Always Looking, Always Learning

<http://www.latast.com/ViewPage/Home.aspx>

MyFeedMe is your personal research assistant: always on, always looking, always learning. You continuously receive intelligent research on real world events in real time, allowing you to work smarter and achieve more. MyFeedMe is different because it digs deeper, provides you with focused results that are more in tune with your needs, and continuously improves as you use it. Unlike search engines and manual research, MyFeedMe automates and intelligently queries deep web information as it is published, in real time. Features include: 1) MyFeedMe keeps you informed and aware 24 x 7 by following intelligence, news and business insight to you as it develops; 2) MyFeedMe invites you to set up personalised queries so that it knows and learns about the intelligence, news and business insight you are interested in; 3) MyFeedMe learns from your queries and interrogates millions of web sites, blogs, chat rooms, discussion boards and podcasts. You can also add your own links to sites and servers that contain content that interests you and MyFeedMe will permanently track and monitor that content 24 x 7 and find similar, related content from other sources on your behalf; 4) MyFeedMe monitors the web continuously and forwards crucial intelligence, news and business insight to your PC and/or handheld device; and 5) MyFeedMe learns from your use and feedback. You decide how well MyFeedMe is performing and MyFeedMe adjusts its queries and output to reflect your specific need for intelligence, news and business insight. MyFeedMe is not a search engine. It is a continuous query system. It is all about user simplicity, effectiveness and results. MyFeedMe uses cutting edge web 2.0 and web 3.0 technology, specially programmed algorithms and NLP to allow intelligent Internet research. International Journal of Global Warming

<http://www.inderscience.com/ijgw>

The primary mission of IJGW is to bring all disciplines together for both local and global solutions to combat global warming and its consequences. IJGW focuses around nine main pillars: better remediation, better avoidance, better efficiency, better cost effectiveness, better design, better resource utilisation, better environmental quality, better energy security, and better sustainable development. It also address issues related to global changes as a direct and/or indirect result of climate modification and strategies for adaptation to such changes. IJGW seeks to unite all disciplines involved in the understanding of and response to global warming and its impacts through solutions. They therefore welcome papers from disciplines as diverse as - but not limited to - engineering, climate science, ecology, economics, education, management, information sciences, politics, and strategy development, etc. This has been added to Green Files Subject Tracer™ Information Blog.

International Journal of Decision Sciences, Risk and Management

<http://www.inderscience.com/browse/index.php?journalID=254>

IJDSRM publishes scholarly empirical and theoretical research articles that have a high impact on the field of management and decision making. The journal actively fosters the exchange of theoretical as well as practical views, case-based experiences and state-of-the-art applications, which ultimately shape contemporary management and decision making trends in the highly competitive SME sector, extending also to large organisations, institutions and the public-sector. True management insight is elicited only by comprehending a whole that is more than the sum of its parts. Decision sciences, risk and management therefore form a trinity for contemporary decision-making theory and practice, in essence reflecting the interaction between quantitative models and techniques, uncertainty modelling, qualitative and procedural approaches, respectively. At the same time, developments taking place around the world point that this multidimensional trend extends its reach both within and beyond the business world, including the public sector and the broader institutional level, which are also actively seeking improved efficiency, higher productivity and results-driven policy making and implementation.

Middle East Report Online

<http://www.merip.org/index.html>

Middle East Report provides news and perspectives about the Middle East not available from mainstream news sources. The magazine has developed a reputation for independent analysis of events and developments in the Middle East. Understanding of the Middle East in the United States and Europe is limited and plagued by stereotypes and misconceptions. MERIP successfully addresses these limitations by addressing a broad range of social, political and cultural issues, and by soliciting writings and views from authors from the Middle East not often read in the West. The electronic arm of the magazine, Middle East Report Online, provides timely analyses of breaking news stories in addition to selected content from the print quarterly Middle East Report. Sports Technology

<http://www3.interscience.wiley.com/journal/117899685/home>

Sports Technology is a unique source of information on all aspects of sports technology. This international journal aims to establish stronger links between industrial and academic research, and enhance communication between athletes, coaches, engineers, scientists, biomechanists, managers and administrators involved with sports and sports technology. Design and development of sports products and infrastructure require close collaboration between all stakeholders, as well as good understanding of both life and sports sciences, principles of economy and engineering. Therefore it is only natural that a journal focusing on sports technology is inter-and transdisciplinary as well as holistic in its approach. Sports Technology publishes articles that are classified either as scientific research articles (focusing on the scientific aspects of sports technology research) or technical research and development articles (focusing on the commercial product design and development aspects). Each issue of the journal contains an attractive mix of articles (invited reviews, original peer-reviewed scientific articles and technical R&D articles, experts opinions, book reviews, news from major events and industry) and generous use of color. In particular, major events are highlighted, with rapid publication of results related to investigations during these events (such as from Olympic Games and World Championships).

UbuWeb - Repository for Visual, Concrete and Sound Poetry

<http://www.ubu.com/>

UbuWeb was founded in November of 1996, initially as a repository for visual, concrete and, later, sound poetry. Over the years, UbuWeb has embraced all forms of the avant-garde and beyond. Its parameters continue to expand in all directions. UbuWeb posts much of its content without permission; they rip out-of-print LPs into sound files; they scan as many old books as they can get their hands on; they post essays as fast as they can OCR them. UbuWeb is an unlimited resource with unlimited space to fill. It is in this way that the site has grown to encompass hundreds of artists, hundreds of gigabytes of sound files, books, texts and videos. They have won many prestigious internet awards and are acknowledged web-wide as the definitive source for Visual, Concrete + Sound Poetry. Kiva - Lenders to Entrepreneurs Micro-Lending Website

<http://www.kiva.org/>

Kiva lets you lend to a specific entrepreneur, empowering them to lift themselves out of poverty. Kiva's mission is to connect people through lending for the sake of alleviating poverty. Kiva is the world's first person-to-person micro-lending website, empowering individuals to lend directly to unique entrepreneurs around the globe. The people you see on Kiva's site are real individuals in need of funding - not marketing material. When you browse entrepreneurs' profiles on the site, choose someone to lend to, and then make a loan, you are helping a real person make great strides towards economic independence and improve life for themselves, their family, and their community. Throughout the course of the loan (usually 6-12 months), you can receive email journal updates and track repayments. Then, when you get your loan money back, you can relend to someone else in need. International Journal of Collaborative Engineering

<http://www.inderscience.com/ijce>

IJCE promotes and fosters scholarly discussion on the emerging subject of collaborative decision making in the engineering discipline. Collaborative engineering studies the interactive process of engineering collaboration, whereby multiple interested stakeholders resolve conflicts, bargain for individual or collective advantages, agree upon courses of action, and/or attempt to craft joint outcomes which serve their mutual interests. The IJCE emphasis is on the implications that collaborative consensus-building activities have on both the efficiency of technical teams and the quality of their results. This perspective acknowledges the complexity of collaborative engineering as an interface between decision and negotiation processes as well as in the assimilation of social and technical aspects of engineering activities operating in parallel over different time-space and discipline scales.

Ecohydrology

<http://www3.interscience.wiley.com/journal/114209870/home>

Ecohydrology is an international journal publishing original scientific and review papers that aim to improve understanding of processes at the interface between ecology and hydrology and associated applications related to environmental management.

Ecohydrology seeks to increase interdisciplinary insights by placing particular emphasis on interactions and associated feedbacks in both space and time between ecological systems and the hydrological cycle. Research contributions are solicited from disciplines focusing on the physical, ecological, biological, biogeochemical, geomorphological, drainage basin, mathematical and methodological aspects of ecohydrology. Research in both terrestrial and aquatic systems is of interest provided it explicitly links ecological systems and the hydrologic cycle; research such as aquatic ecological, channel engineering, or ecological or hydrological modelling is less appropriate for the journal unless it specifically addresses the criteria above. Manuscripts describing individual case studies are of interest in cases where broader insights are discussed beyond site and species-specific results. The Journal also publishes research on new instrumentation and techniques if they describe truly new and significant advances in methodology that can be broadly applied to the ecohydrological understanding and management of environmental systems. Occasional special issues will be published that cover themes emergent from conferences, ecological and hydrological science societies and key research topics. PostRank - Ranking Any Kind of Online Content

<http://www.postrank.com/>

PostRank is a scoring system developed by AideRSS to rank any kind of online content, such as RSS feed items, blog posts, articles, or news stories. PostRank is based on social engagement, which refers to how interesting or relevant people have found an item or category to be. Examples of engagement include writing a blog post in response to someone else, bookmarking an article, leaving a comment on a blog, or clicking a link to read a news item. PostRank measures engagement by analyzing the types and frequency of an audience's interaction with online content. An item's PostRank score represents how interesting and relevant people have found it to be. The more interesting or relevant an item is, the more work they will do to share or respond to that item so interactions that require more effort are weighted higher.

PostRank scoring is based on analysis of the "5 Cs" of engagement: creating, critiquing, chatting, collecting, and clicking. By collecting interaction engagement_metrics in these categories the overall engagement score is calculated and the PostRank value is determined.

Creating: The strongest form of engagement is demonstrated by using an item as inspiration to create your own, for example, writing your own blog post that responds to or refutes someone else's blog post. Creation requires the most thought and investment of time, actively generates conversation, and therefore indicates the highest level of engagement

Critiquing: Reading a blog post and then leaving a comment requires an investment of time, thought and effort (or sometimes just typing and name-calling...), and is a form of conversation. However, it requires less effort than writing a whole blog post. So while it is an important action, it does not indicate as much engagement as Creating.

Chatting: Sharing and discussing information can often be started with one click, so it doesn't require a major investment of effort. However, a desire to share is a strong indication of relevance, and the act of sharing and its ensuing discussion are acts of conversation. Use of social media applications like Twitter encourage both the sharing of information and the resulting conversations. As a result, social media "chatting" indicates a good level of engagement.

Collecting: Bookmarking or submitting items to social sites also tend to be "one-click" actions. They are intentional acts of archiving and sharing, but don't require much time or effort. However, the sharing that occurs often sparks conversations, so Collecting does demonstrate some engagement.

Clicking: Activities like clicks and page views indicate lower engagement because they're passive interactions. Clicking a link to read a blog post doesn't require much work, and you're not giving anything back except your reading time. It is an intentional act, however, and thus indicates a mild level of interest and engagement. Which may grow after the item is read.

Molecular Oncology

<http://www.molecularoncology.org/>

Molecular Oncology highlights new discoveries, approaches, as well as technical developments, in basic, clinical and discovery-driven translational research. Topics include:

- * Key biological processes such as cell cycle; DNA repair; apoptosis; invasion and metastasis; angiogenesis and lymphangiogenesis; cell signalling and interactive networks; immune response.
- * Emerging technologies (genomics, proteomics, functional genomics, metabolomics, tissue arrays, imaging), and model systems.
- * Biomarkers: diagnosis, prognosis, stratification and efficacy.
- * Cancer genetics, epigenetics, and genomic instability.
- * Minimal residual disease, pre-malignant lesions.
- * Cancer micro-environment.
- * Molecular pathology.
- * Tumour immunology.
- * Translational research.
- * Cancer therapy (target discovery, drug design, immunotherapy, combination therapies, resistance, and individualised treatment).
- * Chemotherapy, radiotherapy and surgery.
- * Clinical pharmacology.
- * Clinical trials, integration of basic science into cancer clinical trials.
- * Epidemiology and prevention.
- * Infrastructures (biobanks, databases, genomic resources).

A main feature of the Journal is to provide an international forum for debating cancer issues, and for integrating the input of all the stakeholders. Coverage: Reviews, original articles, technical notes, editorials, news & views (commentary, science policy issues, ethical and legal issues, patient organisations, industry needs and alliances, regulatory issues, news items), letters to the editor, conference announcements, advertisements.

Personality and Mental Health

<http://www3.interscience.wiley.com/journal/114298425/home>

At the cusp of a rapid expansion, clinically, academically, legally and politically, the field of personality and mental health is an emerging area of research that currently covers three distinct literatures: DSM-IV/ICD-10 defined personality disorders, psychopathy and offending behaviour. Providing leadership in this new, emerging field, Personality and Mental Health: Multidisciplinary Studies from Personality Dysfunction to Criminal Behaviour will define more clearly, not merely react to, the field and disciplines involved in research into personality and mental health and for the first time unite the three literatures. Through its multidisciplinary and service orientated approach, Personality and Mental Health will provide an authoritative source of information for researchers, practitioners and policy makers working in the field of personality and mental health. The Journal seeks to encourage exchange amongst individuals and groups working in the field, as well as debate amongst opinion formers and policy makers in this high profile area. It will also seek to encourage innovation and provide a platform for the publication of new approaches to treatment, assessment and service delivery. The journal will publish:

- * a clinical case in each issue, with invited commentary by, for example, lawyers, ethicists, service users etc.
- * reviews and original research articles including rapid communications
- * a correspondence section as the journal becomes established
- * a limited book review section, expanding as demand dictates

The scope of the Journal will encompass the following:

- * Service evaluation and development: including the evaluation of current treatment and assessment protocols, classification and aetiology, the development and trialling of innovative interventions including psychological, psychiatric, pharmacological, social care and self-management and the review and development of delivery models and services.
- * Organisational evaluation and development: including assessment of the organisational capacity of service units and the working practices of staff, the impact of different organisational strategies on the type, level and quality of services delivered.
- * Law, policy and ethics: including review and critical analysis of new criminal justice, social care and Human Rights legislation and its application to people with personality disorders and the analysis of policy developments.
- * Research methodology, research practice and dissemination: including the development of innovative methodologies and research practices targeting hard

The99Percent - It's Not About Ideas, Its About Making Ideas Happen

<http://the99percent.com/>

99% is the research arm of Behance, a company dedicated to organizing the creative world to make ideas happen. The creation of 99%, which was launched with their inaugural conference in 2009, sprung from the belief that, as creative professionals, they often focus too much on idea generation and not enough on execution. To get to the crux of the forces behind idea execution, 99% regularly interviews prominent and emerging creative professionals known for their high level of productivity. Based on their interviews, they publish a regular series of articles, tips, and videos on their website, which offers insight into how especially productive teams and people make their ideas happen, time and time again. Reference Chat Libraries - Global Listing

http://liswiki.org/wiki/Chat_reference_libraries

This list is for libraries with some form of synchronous or chat reference services. An exhaustive list of libraries offering other virtual reference services is nowadays akin to a list of libraries that offer telephone service; to search the thousands of library sites which employ e-mail links or simple web feedback forms, see Libweb. Groups of libraries broader than the individual institutions (individual libraries, libraries within the same university system, or public library county branch system) are shown in bold. Listed by country, state, and then alphabetically by institution (or service name for cooperatives). Vendor information and other notes are listed when possible. China-America Digital Academic Library (CADAL)

<http://www.cadal.cn/enc/>

The objective of this [2004 - ed.] project is to create a free-to-read, searchable collection of one million books, primarily in the English language, available to everyone over the Internet. This task is accomplished by scanning the books and indexing their full text. The text file is created, where possible, through optical character recognition. The result will be a unique resource accessible to anyone in the world 24x7x365, without regard to nationality or socioeconomic background. Typical large high-school libraries house fewer than 30,000 volumes. One million volumes is the approximate size of the combined libraries at Carnegie Mellon University. The total number of different titles indexed in OCLC's WorldCat is about 48 million. One million books, therefore, is more than the holdings of any high-school, equivalent to the library at a substantial university and a

International Journal of Transdisciplinary Research (IJTR)

<http://www.ijtr.org/Default.htm>

The journal is concerned with extending and integrating the study of economics with disciplines within the natural and social sciences, as well as the humanities. International Journal of Transdisciplinary Research (IJTR) is a journal where alternative frameworks can be disseminated and argued to develop a unifying vision of an economic paradigm that realistically portrays economic systems as a whole. They feel that there needs to be a revolution in the field of economics, to develop new approaches to real world problems. Because economics is intertwined in almost every field of research, they are looking for transdisciplinary research. If science wishes to contribute to solving these real world issues, transdisciplinary collaboration and communication becomes necessary. Therefore, IJTR is a platform for the practice of transdisciplinary research. As such, IJTR is a journal for article submissions on epistemological issues such as:

- (1) Sustainability,
- (2) Social Multicriteria Evaluations,
- (3) Ecological Economics and the Biophysical Foundations of Economics,
- (4) Systems Research, and
- (5) Complexity and Post Normal Science.

If your research does not fall into these broad categories, then IJTR is not the place to submit your article. The journal is for the constructive argument and the development of alternative ways to govern sustainability. Furthermore, we seek research articles from colleagues in fields other than economics on how economic systems really work.

AIP UniPHY - Scientific Social Networking

<http://www.aipuniphy.org/Portal/Portal.aspx>

AIP UniPHY is the world's first literature-based professional social networking site for physical science researchers. The site allows physicists, engineers, and other scientists to directly connect with and explore their professional contacts and to identify researchers with the expertise needed for future collaborations. AIP UniPHY, powered by Collexis High Definition Search, enables fast, accurate and extraordinary knowledge retrieval and discovery, and empowers individuals to search for and identify documents, researchers, trends, and new discoveries more quickly, precisely — and thoroughly — than ever before. AIP UniPHY provides intuitive interfaces through which researchers can network and share data — all with the goal of advancing physics research worldwide. Forge connections with physics colleagues worldwide. Locate your co-authors, and the co-authors of your co-authors. Confirm the research interests of potential collaborators from more than 180,000 pre-populated profiles. TxtNinja - Hide eMail, Text or Domain From Search Engines

<http://www.txtninja.com/>

TxtNinja is the perfect tool for anyone. There is no hard and fast rule as to how you should use TxtNinja; you're free to use it in any and every way you can think of. In fact, the list of possibilities for TxtNinja is so endless, you are encouraged to contribute to the index. There are absolutely no restrictions on the usage of TxtNinja images. Your generated images are stored forever on our servers as long as their accessed at least once every 365 days. If you need to give out your email over the internet and use simple plain text, spam bots or email harvesters will pick up your email and your inbox will be home to thousands of spam messages. The simplest way would be to use TxtNinja, where your email address will be known to humans and will go undetected by bots. Some languages such as Japanese and Greek contain characters that may not be recognised or allowed by websites and forums. Now, TxtNinja supports input from many other languages so you have a quick workaround! Other uses include: 1) Sale of domains and websites, 2) Bypassing text filters, 3) Asking for help on forums/websites, and 6) Sending sensitive information via MSN/etc. . Restart - Web Based Reference Application

<http://www.textalibrarian.com/refstart.php>

RefStart is a web-based reference application giving librarians customizable one-click access to reference tools, search, web 2.0 sites and popular social networks. As a standard feature of Text a Librarian, RefStart enables librarians to make the most efficient use of time while receiving and responding to patron inquiries. Inspired by conversations with over 1,000 reference librarians, RefStart is a fully flexible, Library 2.0-friendly addition to Mosio's Text a Librarian web-based software, increasing efficiencies at (or away from) the library reference desk. Whether yours is an academic, public or special/corporate library, we think you will find it to be incredibly useful for general search, internal library databases and as a helpful, online starting point for your virtual reference tools. New Zealand Electronic Text Centre

<http://www.nzetc.org/>

The New Zealand Electronic Text Centre has four aims: a) To create a digital library providing open access to significant New Zealand and Pacific Island texts and materials. This encompasses both digitised heritage material and born-digital resources; b) To effectively partner with other organisations, as a collaborator and service provider, on a variety of digitisation and digital content projects; c) To build a wider community skilled in the use and creation of digital materials through teaching and training activities and by publishing and presenting the results of research; and d) To work at the intersection of computing tools with textual material and investigate how these tools may be used to make new knowledge from our cultural inheritance. Acting on these goals, NZETC is engaged in an ongoing programme of digitisation and hosts an expanding online library. The standards-based collection is delivered through an Open Source framework and offers full and free access to a range of materials in multiple formats for download or online browsing. Today the NZETC collection contains over 2,600 texts (around 65,000 pages) and receives over 10,000 visits each day. This has been added to Research Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog. GroupSites - How Groups Make Things Happen

<http://www.groupsite.com/>

Some call it Web 2.0, others call it the social web. They call it a change. Blogs, social networks, wiki's and other recent innovations have transformed the Web and how many of us use it. While these new innovations are clearly powerful, they don't believe that they've adequately empowered people within groups to come together and collectively make things happen. So they have made it their mission to introduce the Groupsite, a new kind of website. Groupsites embody the Web's evolution into a social/collaborative medium by bringing together the most useful features of traditional websites, discussion forums, listservs, blogs, collaboration software and social networks. With Groupsites, people from a wide range of professional and social groups within companies, communities, non-profits, families and more are now able to instantly and easily communicate, share, network. Best of all, basic Groupsites are free to create and can be setup to be public, completely private and secure, or somewhere in between. What Value Do Users Derive From Social Networking Applications? By Larry Neale and Rebekah Russell-Bennett

<http://www.uic.edu/htbin/cgiwrap/bin/ojs/index.php/fm/article/view/2506>

Abstract:

Why do users of social networking sites recommend some applications to their friends while rejecting others? What value do they obtain from applications? This exploratory study investigates the value users derive from 'cool' Facebook applications, and explores the features that either encourage or discourage users to recommend applications to their friends. Our qualitative data reveal consumers derive a combination of functional value along with either social or emotional value from the applications. Female Facebook users indicate self-expression as important motivators, while males tend to use Facebook applications to socially compete. Three broad categories emerged for application features; symmetrical features can both encourage or discourage recommendation, polar features where different levels of the same feature encourage or discourage, and uni-directional features only encourage or discourage but not both. Recommending or not recommending an application tends to be the result of a combination of features and context, rather than one feature in isolation.
