V7N12

December 2009

Welcome to the V7N12 December 2009 issue of the Awareness Watch™ Newsletter. This newsletter is available as a complimentary subscription and will be issued monthly. Each newsletter will feature the following:

Awareness Watch™ Featured Report
Awareness Watch™ Spotters
Awareness Watch™ Book/Paper/Article Review
Subject Tracer™ Information Blogs

I am always open to feedback from readers so please feel free to email with all suggestions, reviews and new resources that you feel would be appropriate for inclusion in an upcoming issue of Awareness Watch™. This is an ongoing work of creativity and you will be observing constant changes, constant updates knowing that “change” is the only thing that will remain constant!!

Awareness Watch™ Featured Report

This month's featured report will be highlighting Tutorial Resources with the Subject Tracer located at the Virtual Private Library and accessible online at the following URL:

<http://www.TutorialResources.info/>

These tutorial resources will allow you the ability to create your own private virtual library for tutorial resources and sites. These resources will keep you on the correct and positive path for continued knowledge discovery required to fulfill your academic, business and professional quest for current awareness and new knowledge.

BongTones - The RingTone Hub

<http://www.bongotones.com/>

BongoTones.com was the brainchild of three friends from Detroit and Toronto. It began when they were each researching FREE phone multimedia websites and came to the conclusion that “there must be an easier way.” After months of conversation and further research, BongoTones.com was born. With a lot of determination and a little capital they have redefined the way people search and obtain mobile phone content online. They strive to improve your wireless technology experience. They continually improve their web site in order to remain up-to-date with the ever-changing nature of their industry. At BongoTones.com, they believe that a happy and safe user is a loyal user. They provide options to you from our easy-to-use display and quickly connect you to your desired content. Their search engine can find all kinds of content – from ringtones and wallpapers to games and videos. However, what really sets them apart from others is that they listen to you, their users. BongoTones.com employees personally answer each and every email quickly and truthfully. They promise to never reply with any information that they personally would not find satisfying. If there is a problem, they promise that it will be fixed ASAP. After all, why shouldn't the access of wireless content for your phone be as enjoyable as the communication it provides? This has been added to the tools section of Research Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog.

Journal title: Review of Behavioral Finance

<http://http://www3.interscience.wiley.com/journal/121355847/home>

The Review of Behavioral Finance provides an outlet for original peer-reviewed scholarly research debating the increasingly important area of behavioral finance. The Review welcomes high quality theoretical, empirical or experimental articles in any area relating to behavioral finance for consideration for publication. In addition to publishing articles which primarily adopt a standard finance-based approach, the Review also welcomes interdisciplinary research which contributes to improved understanding of the role of behavioral influences on financial markets and financial decision making within firms. The Review of Behavioral Finance welcomes submissions relating to any area of behavioral finance, including, but not limited to, the following:

- * Investor behavior and asset prices
- * Over-reaction and under-reaction in financial markets
- * Herding behavior and bubbles in financial markets
- * Derivative market trading
- * Corporate financial decisions
- * Anomalies in financial markets
- * Experimental approaches to financial decision making
- * Risk attitudes and investment decisions

SWORD - Simple Web-service Offering Repository Deposit

<http://www.swordapp.org/>

SWORD is a lightweight protocol for depositing content from one location to another. It stands for Simple Web-service Offering Repository Deposit and is a profile of the Atom Publishing Protocol (known as APP or ATOMPUB). SWORD has been funded by the Joint Information Systems Committee to develop the SWORD profile and a number of demonstration implementations. The SWORD vision is 'lowering the barriers to deposit', principally for depositing content (any content!) into repositories, but potentially for depositing into any system which wants to receive content from remote sources. This has been added to the tools section of Research Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog.

eScholarship - Open Access Scholarly Publishing

BookServer - Distributed Lending and Vending Over the Internet

<http://www.archive.org/bookserver>

The widespread success of digital reading devices has proven that the world is ready to read books on screens. As the audience for digital books grows, we can evolve from an environment of single devices connected to single sources into a distributed system where readers can find books from sources across the Web to read on whatever device they have. Publishers are creating digital versions of their popular books, and the library community is creating digital archives of their printed collections. BookServer is an open system to find, buy, or borrow these books, just like we use an open system to find Web sites. The BookServer is a growing open architecture for vending and lending digital books over the Internet. Built on open catalog and open book formats, the BookServer model allows a wide network of publishers, booksellers, libraries, and even authors to make their catalogs of books available directly to readers through their laptops, phones, netbooks, or dedicated reading devices. BookServer facilitates pay transactions, borrowing books from libraries, and downloading free, publicly accessible books. This has been added to Reference Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog. ### FeedMyInbox - RSS to eMail

<http://www.feedmyinbox.com/>

FeedMyInbox is a very simple service that attempts to bridge the gap between feeds (RSS, XML, Atom) and email. If you would like to know more about what a feed is, have a look at Wikipedia. Only 3% of computer users are familiar with how feeds work, and are using feed readers to get up-to-date information from their favorite sites. They don't think the other 97% should be left out in the cold, so now you can subscribe to a feed with your email address. A three step process: Step 1: Find the site you would like to track, such as a blog, a news site, twitter feed, or even craigslist search results. Most browsers will display whether there is a feed on the page or not. Look for the orange/white or blue/white icons on the right side of your browser. Step 2: Once you find a feed you would like to subscribe to, simply type in the web address (URL) for the site on FeedMyInbox.com. They will find the feed(s) available on the page, and you can select what you want to subscribe to. Step 3: Once you subscribe to a feed, they will send an email to the address you specified. Simply click the link that is enclosed to confirm that your email address is correct, and you are all set. An email will be sent to you each time the feed is updated, but no more than every 24 hours (to cut down on inbox clutter). Whether there is 1 post or 10 posts to the feed in a 24 hour period, you receive them all in one email. Each FeedMyInbox email will have an unsubscribe link on the bottom. Simply click it to unsubscribe from a particular feed. Nothing else is required—you will be removed immediately. ## Keebra - Explore, Publish, Connect and Be Heard

<http://www.keebra.com/>

Ideas matter and within the pages of books, ideas abound. Keebra is a provocative website promoting the 'Age of Engagement' for individuals with vibrant minds and a healthy appetite for ideas. More sophisticated than the ubiquitous book clubs, which have become an excuse for socializing about anything but books and the abundance of online retailers for which opinions are not much more than promotional gibberish, Keebra's online environment is one in which visitors can discuss, share, recommend, comment and buy, as a means of personal enrichment and fulfillment. While other websites fail to tap the desire of readers to have open and frank discussions on religion, politics, business and current events, and the use of books as a way to spark them, Keebra is leading the way. Reading books, discussing issues and sharing ideas with other intellectual individuals across the globe is Keebra's core mission. Keebra is an interactive community where the world's 'Net-Generation' of thought leaders, passionate readers, intellectuals and everyday thinkers can find, share and discuss books and resources of importance. ## SkypeCap - Saving Audio and Video Sessions From Skype

<http://www.skypecap.com/>

Have you ever wanted to save your Skype sessions so that you could see or hear them again later or share them with someone else? Now you can with SkypeCap! Have you ever missed information during a session and wish that you had a rewind button? Now you do with SkypeCap! SkypeCap is the complete resource for capturing and recording Skype audio and video sessions in real time. Use SkypeCap to record: 1) Skype Casts, 2) webcam sessions, 3) teleconference calls, 4) meetings, 5) training sessions, 6) announcements, 7) interviews, 8) group brainstorming sessions, and 9) telephone and cellular phone calls (in SkypeOut mode). The possibilities are endless! You control when recording begins and ends, as well as the file format and level of quality at which the recordings should be captured. SkypeCap lets you know when it recognizes that Skype audio and video sessions are occurring so that you can record them. SkypeCap can even record the audio and video sessions for you automatically! Only you will know that the audio or video sessions are being recorded. This has been added to the tools section of Research Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog. ### Journal of Artificial General Intelligence (JAGI)

<http://journal.agi-network.org/Home/tabid/72/Default.aspx>

Journal of Artificial General Intelligence (JAGI) is a peer-reviewed open-access academic journal, supported by the Artificial General Intelligence (AGI) research community. AGI is an emerging field aiming at the building of "thinking machines", that is, general-purpose systems with intelligence comparable to the human mind. While this was the original goal of Artificial Intelligence (AI), the mainstream AI research has turned into domain-dependent and problem-specific solutions, therefore it becomes necessary to use a new name to indicate the research that still pursues the "Grand AI Dream". Similar labels for this kind of research include "Strong AI", "Human-level AI", etc. The problems in general-purpose intelligence systems are very different from those in special-purpose systems. Therefore, this journal is different from traditional AI journals in its stress on the long-term potential of the research towards the ultimate goal of AGI, rather than their immediate applications. Articles focused on details of AGI systems are welcome, if they clearly indicate the relation between the special topics and intelligence as a whole, by addressing the generality, extendability, and scalability of the techniques proposed. Since AGI research is still in its early stage, the journal strongly encourages novel approaches coming from various theoretical and technical traditions, including (but not limited to) symbolic, connectionist, statistical, evolutionary, robotic, information-theoretic, as well as integrative and hybrid approaches. ## This We Know: Explore U.S. Government Data About Your Community

<http://www.thisweknow.org/>

Their mission is to present the information the U.S. government collects about every community. By publishing this data in an easy to understand and consistent manner, they seek to empower citizens to act on what's known. In this first phase of development, they focused on a handful of nationwide data sets from six different agencies in the data.gov catalog. They picked data sets that each had a spatial component. All the data sets were converted to RDF and loaded into a RDF database that serves as the foundation for this website. Their long-term vision for ThisWeKnow is to model the entire data.gov catalog and make it available to the public using Semantic Web standards as a large-scale online database. ThisWeKnow will provide citizens with a single destination where they can search and browse all the information the government collects. It will also provide other application developers with a powerful standards-based API for accessing the data. Loading governmental databases into a single, flexible data store breaks down silos of information and facilitates inferences across multiple data stores. For example, inferences can be made by combining census demographic data from the Agency of Commerce, factory information from the Environmental Protection Agency, information about employment from the Department of Labor, and so on. They can't even begin to imagine the discoveries that will become possible after all these data are loaded into an integrated repository. Tim Berners-Lee's describes a Semantic Web with data distributed across the Internet that is readable by people while simultaneously being available and manipulable by software agents. To that end, in addition to building our Web pages for browsing and searching these data, we will expose all the data in the catalog to computers as RDF that can be retrieved via the SPARQL Query Language. ### Data Audit Framework (DAF)

<http://www.data-audit.eu/>

The Data Audit Framework (DAF) provides organisations with the means to identify, locate, describe and assess how they are managing their research data assets. DAF combines a set of methods with an online tool to enable data auditors to gather this information. DAF will help ensure that research data produced in UK Higher Education Institutions is preserved and remains accessible in the long term. The Data Audit Framework has been created in a project led by HATII at the University of Glasgow. The methodology continues to be updated in light of feedback received from their users. It is also used for the basis of their online tool. This has been added to Research Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog.

Automated Experimentation

<http://www.aejournal.net/>

Automated Experimentation is an open access journal that encompasses high-quality research on all aspects of the automation of clusters of experiments for high throughput, particularly (but not exclusively) in the fields of biomedicine and biomedical informatics. Automated Experimentation aims to provide a platform for biomedical and informatics researchers to develop, execute, reuse, share, revise, and recombine their automated experimentation processes or protocols. There is no substitute for scientific experimentation in discovering new reliable knowledge however experimentation is highly expensive. Therefore it is desirable to automate the execution of a cluster of experiments according to pre-specified computational protocols. With recent and ongoing developments in engineering (e.g. Labs-on-a-chip), laboratory robotics, and informatics, automated experimentation is crucial for expediting large-scale research like systems biology and translational medicine. Automated Experimentation features the methodology, protocols, and significant results of automated experiments for easy sharing among laboratories worldwide. Automated Experimentation covers all fields that are related to high-throughput and automated experimentation. Topical areas include (but are not limited to):

- * Use of experiment protocols and scientific workflows
- * Representing experiment protocols, apparatus and data in domain-specific languages
- * Verification and validation methods
- * Instrument, apparatus or robotic setups
- * Robot scientists and intelligent experimentation systems
- * Web-based and computational experimentation
- * Software for automating the experiment process
- * Biomedical and clinical experimentation
- * Scientific findings obtained by automated experiments
- * Knowledge sharing infrastructures applied to experimentation
- * eScience and eResearch
- * Philosophy, theories and formalisms
- * Methods of hypothesis generation
- * Capturing the process of arguments in automated experiments

<http://www.feng-gui.com/>

Feng-GUI empower designers, advertisers and photographers to effectively analyze Attention and Attraction in visuals. Find out how people see your website, photo or ad and which areas are getting most of the attention. This artificial intelligence service simulates human vision during the first 5 seconds of exposure to visuals, and creates heatmaps based on an algorithm that predicts what a real human would be most likely to look at. This offers designers, advertisers and creatives, a Pre-testing technology that predicts performance of an image, by analyzing levels of attention, brand effectiveness and placement, as well as breaking down the Flow of Attention. ## Journal of Algorithms & Computational Technology

<http://www.multi-science.co.uk/jact.htm>

The journal aims to serve an interdisciplinary community which needs to use mathematical techniques in the development of computational analysis and engineering methodology, in order to better solve real life problems such as noise, vibration, energy, civil engineering, etc. It also aims to bridge the subject areas of mathematics, classical computer science, engineering, and future generation computational analysis. The journal is fundamentally different from many journals of numerical analysis, computational analysis, and algorithms. The acceptance of papers is judged on the use of mathematical techniques and/or engineering methodology in the computational analysis, and in the engineering of the solutions and simulations of complex industrial and real life systems. Articles describing carefully tested computational techniques, including post-processing visualisation, for real life systems are welcome on the basis of the above criteria. Articles dealing with mathematical models, computational analysis, and computational processes, must be driven by applications with industrial and real life relevance and are judged on the basis of the above criteria. Longer papers which survey recent progress in the field of computational technology and algorithms are also published.

iZoca - Free Group Networking Platform

<http://www.izoca.com/>

iZoca connects the world around you from your perspective, to help organize your life. Utilizing a platform that combines social networks with organizational tools, iZoca provides a new and simple way for individuals, groups and organizations to manage projects, plan events and activities. The name iZoca is derived from the Spanish word “zocalo” meaning a square or plaza where people congregate. iZoca was founded in September, 2007 and is located in New York's Tech Valley Region. When a person joins iZoca there are several tools available to them. Each member has their own dynamic personal calendar they can use to create private events. If they decide to join a group, all the events from the group they join can populate their personal iZoca calendar (see Calendar). An iZoca member can create their own group, for any reason, and invite others to join. They can search and join groups that are found in the iZoca directory and create customized profiles for each of their groups. Members can connect with other iZoca members and exchange private messages. iZoca members can join or create as many groups as they want to stay connected. ### GazoPa - Similar Image Search

<http://www.gazopa.com/>

GazoPa is a similar image search service on the web in open beta by Hitachi. Users can search images from the web based on user's own photo, drawings, images found on the web and keywords. GazoPa enables users to search for a similar image from characteristics such as a color or a shape extracted from an image itself. There are abundant quantities of images on the web, however many of these simply cannot be described by keywords. Since GazoPa uses image features to search other similar images, a vast range of images can be retrieved from the web. GazoPa is a new visual search service that can navigate users to new territories on the web. This has been added to the tools section of Research Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog. This has been added to Business Intelligence Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog.

MEDIE - Semantic Retrieval Engine for MEDLINE

<http://www.tsujii.is.s.u-tokyo.ac.jp/medie/>

MEDIE is an intelligent search engine to retrieve biomedical correlations from MEDLINE, based on indexing by Natural Language Processing and Text Mining techniques. You can find abstracts/sentences in MEDLINE by specifying semantics of correlations; for example, "What activates p53" and "What causes colon cancer". Currently, 18,777,482 MEDLINE articles are indexed. This has been added to Healthcare Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog. This has been added to eHealthcareBot Search Engine.

Nutrients

<http://www.mdpi.com/journal/nutrients/>

Twitter Lists 2 RSS

<http://twiterlist2rss.appspot.com/>

Instead of taking an JSON feed and turning it in to RSS. Dave Winer shows you can just use OPML. He finds the members of the list, and then creates an OPML file that points to each individuals status update RSS. Think its a much better solution if you are looking to use these feeds in something like google reader. ## FACTA+ - Finding Associated Biomedical Concepts with Text Analysis

<http://refine1-nactem.mc.man.ac.uk/facta/>

FACTA+ is a simple text mining tool to help discover associations between biomedical concepts mentioned in MEDLINE articles. You can navigate these associations and their corresponding articles in a highly interactive manner. The system accepts an arbitrary query term and displays relevant concepts on the spot. A broad range of concepts are retrieved by the use of large-scale biomedical dictionaries containing the names of important concepts such as genes, proteins, diseases, and chemical compounds. ## European Surgery

<http://www.springer.com/springerwiennewyork/medicine/journal/10353>

European Surgery is the official journal of the Austrian Society of Surgery and its affiliated societies, the Croatian Surgical Society, the Czech Surgical Society (Member of the Czech Medical Society), the Slovenian Association of Surgeons, and the European Federation for ColoRectal Cancer. The journal European Surgery focuses on general surgery, endocrine surgery, thoracic surgery, plastic surgery, heart and vascular surgery, and traumatology. Special features include sections on new surgical techniques such as minimally invasive surgery and robot surgery, and advances in surgery-related biotechnology, for example, equipment, interdisciplinary perioperative management and surgical oncology. The journal is a powerful instrument in bringing up-to-date scientific information to specialized surgery units of general hospitals. European Surgery presents original articles, reviews, case reports, and short communications on developments in surgical practice and research.

Keyword Competitor Tool - Research and Monitor Competitors

<http://www.keywordcompetitor.com/>

Uncover the organic and paid keywords and ads that your competitors are running right now. Unlike other keyword tools that are limited in the number of keywords that they deliver, Keyword Competitor is able to provide you with a complete list for free. Track your competitors' keywords and ads to see where they are beating you ... and where you are winning. All data is collected in real time on the internet and not from a database. ### SAPIENT - Semantic Annotation of Papers: Interface & ENrichment Tool

<http://www.aber.ac.uk/en/cs/research/cb/projects/art/software/>

The ART project produced a tool for the sentence based semantic annotation of papers (SAPIENT). SAPIENT incorporates SSSplit, an XML aware sentence splitter, which was also created within the ART project. SAPIENT stands for "Semantic Annotation of Papers: Interface & ENrichment Tool". It is an annotation interface implemented as a web application, to help users annotate scientific papers in XML, sentence by sentence, with a set of concepts called General Scientific Concepts. GSCs constitute the set of concepts essential for describing a scientific investigation. However, SAPIENT can also be used in conjunction with other annotation schemas to annotate papers in XML sentence by sentence. SAPIENT also incorporates Oscar3 functionality, allowing the automatic annotation of chemical named entities. This has been added to the tools section of Research Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog.

VoiceThread - Group Conversations Around Images, Documents, and Videos

<http://voicethread.com/>

With VoiceThread, group conversations are collected and shared in one place from anywhere in the world. All with no software to install. A VoiceThread is a collaborative, multimedia slide show that holds images, documents, and videos and allows people to navigate pages and leave comments in 5 ways - using voice (with a mic or telephone), text, audio file, or video (via a webcam). Share a VoiceThread with friends, students, and colleagues for them to record comments too. Users can doodle while commenting, use multiple identities, and pick which comments are shown through moderation.

VoiceThreads can even be embedded to show and receive comments on other websites and exported to MP3 players or DVDs to play as archival movies. ### Google Wave - Online Tool for Real-Time Communication and Collaboration

<http://wave.google.com/help/wave/about.html>

Google Wave is an online tool for real-time communication and collaboration. A wave can be both a conversation and a document where people can discuss and work together using richly formatted text, photos, videos, maps, and more. What is a wave? A wave is equal parts conversation and document. People can communicate and work together with richly formatted text, photos, videos, maps, and more. A wave is shared. Any participant can reply anywhere in the message, edit the content and add participants at any point in the process. Then playback lets anyone rewind the wave to see who said what and when. A wave is live. With live transmission as you type, participants on a wave can have faster conversations, see edits and interact with extensions in real-time. ## Leapfish - Living the Web

<http://www.leapfish.com/>

The Web has evolved. It used to be a place where people came to just search for simple information. Now it's a place where people come to also share information. Information today that is multi-media and more complex. Information today that is real-time and social – recommended by people who know, and people you know. We call this new place The Living Web, and they have designed an evolved engine to help you get the most from it – a service to help you live the new web. Although we have many ways to search and share information, the current experience is fragmented, ineffective, and ultimately inefficient. On the search side, there are a growing number of disconnected sites for traditional search, niche interests, audio, video, imagery and more. On the sharing side, there is a universe of segregated social networks, blogs, real-time content, multi-media portals and more. This growing disconnection and segregation is the challenge they have decided to embrace. By providing a single, connected, multi-media experience for both searching and sharing traditional and real-time content, they are hoping to make the new web easier, more integrated and efficient. They believe their new web experience benefits everyone online. Existing portals and services benefit from a new found search integration that offers them more user engagement. Consumers benefit with access to more of the information the new web has to offer, that was previously tucked away. But most of all, it benefits you, those living the web by searching and sharing the freshest, most relevant and most interesting content available anywhere. This has been added to the tools section of Research Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog. This has been added to World Wide Web Reference Subject Tracer™ Information Blog.

Watch™ Paper Review

The Privacy Box: A Software Proposal By Woodrow Hartzog

<http://firstmonday.org/htbin/cgiwrap/bin/ojs/index.php/fm/article/view/2682>

Abstract:

The contradiction of social networks is that revealing of personal, private information can have harmful consequences, yet users continue to disclose such information at an alarming rate. Ironically, the advent of social network sites opens the possibility of a relatively safe place to disclose private information. This article proposes a “privacy box” application to be used within social network sites that would require users to accept a pre-written promise of confidentiality before gaining access to personal information. Although it would not serve as a universal remedy for privacy harms on social network sites, it could serve to carve out a space for relatively safe self-disclosure online.
