V8N10

October 2010

Welcome to the V8N10 October 2010 issue of the Awareness Watch™ Newsletter. This newsletter is available as a complimentary subscription and will be issued monthly. Each newsletter will feature the following:

Awareness Watch™ Featured Report
Awareness Watch™ Spotters
Awareness Watch™ Book/Paper/Article Review
Subject Tracer™ Information Blogs

I am always open to feedback from readers so please feel free to email with all suggestions, reviews and new resources that you feel would be appropriate for inclusion in an upcoming issue of Awareness Watch™. This is an ongoing work of creativity and you will be observing constant changes, constant updates knowing that “change” is the only thing that will remain constant!!

Awareness Watch™ Featured Report

This month's featured report covers Data Mining Resources and Web Data Extractors. Data Mining Resources feature resources and sites covering data mining for both the beginners to research as well as advanced researchers and all available over the Internet. Web Data Extractors is a comprehensive listing of sites and sources allowing one to extract information from the web in both real time as well as on a schedule web data extraction. These tools are all available readily from the Internet and most are completely free and open source.

ET.gov - Emerging Technology

<http://et.gov/>

The purpose of this site and process is to facilitate the identification, discovery, and formation of communities of practice (CoPs) around emerging technology (ET) components and specifications of interest to government agencies. The process consists of eight stages. Additional information on the process is available for each of the stages: 1) Identification: Information regarding proposed components is registered, indexed, and made available for browsing and searching. Anyone may identify an ET component using the two-step process indicated in the menu to the left, and we encourage you to consider doing so; 2) Subscription: Government employees and others subscribe to components of interest to them, thereby forming CoPs around those components; 3) Stewardship: The ET Subcommittee accepts stewardship of components for which sufficient interest exists, as evidenced by the CoPs forming around them. The Subcommittee generally conducts workshops on a monthly basis; 4) Graduation: The technical viability and utility of ET components are demonstrated, whereupon they become candidates for use by agencies and multi-agency CoPs (e.g. eGov projects & Lines of Business) and perhaps for inclusion in CORE.gov for Governmentwide access; 5) Budgeting: Funding for governmentwide components may be requested in the President's budget or individual agencies may allocate existing funding to them; 6) Acquisition: Components are acquired for use in government applications; 7) Maintenance: Components are maintained throughout their life cycles; and 8) Retirement/Replacement: Components are retired/replaced as needed. Electronic Resources & Libraries (ER&L)

<http://www.electroniclibrarian.com/>

Electronic Resources & Libraries (ER&L) provides a forum for information professionals to explore ideas, trends, and technologies related to electronic resources and digital services. ER&L facilitates the communication and collaboration of information professionals around issues related to managing electronic resources in the digital world. The conference dates for the 2011 conference have been set. The 2011 conference will be held: February 28 thru– March 2, 2011 in Austin, Texas, USA with pre-conference workshops on February 27, 2011. Hotel and registration information will be made available after 1 September 2010. The goal of the ER&L Conference is to bring together information professionals from libraries and related industries to improve the way they collect, manage, maintain, and make accessible electronic resources in an ever-changing online environment. They do this once a year at an in-person conference. In addition, sessions are recorded and made available online. ER&L allows for cross-pollination of ideas across fields of librarianship not often brought together in traditional public services or technical services conferences. WikiJob - Graduate Jobs and Opportunities

<http://wikijob.co.uk/>

WikiJob has been designed to let students and graduates communicate with their peers, to find out what careers, employers and interviews are really like. They are the first candidate focused graduate recruitment website and the largest job search community on the internet. WikiJob is web 2.0; it's social media, disruptive media and of course, it's a wiki. They are a new type of website called "open source" - something that everyone can contribute to. These days people are much choosier about how they engage with employers. People have become active participants rather than active consumers. WikiJob allows candidates to connect with each other and have conversations about companies (if you recruit graduates, this probably includes you!) Conventional recruitment advertising doesn't work any more. To stand out from competitors, firms need to engage with their audience, build trust and relinquish control. WikiJob can help you do this. Language Guide

<http://www.languageguide.org/>

This website is a collaborative project started by a language enthusiast that not only aims to help language learners, but also to "provide a window into the culture of the people who speak those languages." So how does the site accomplish this feat? It provides interactive language lessons, quizzes, and texts that allow the language learner to hear the word or text pronounced by fluent, often native, speakers. The sound quality is high, and by simply scrolling over any of the pictures in categories as diverse as the alphabet, weather, insects, and money, visitors will hear the word read pronounced. Thirteen languages are offered, including "Vietnamese", "Arabic", "German", "Hindi" and "Hebrew", with the most fully realized lessons for "English", "French" and "Spanish". However, the collaborative nature of the site should soon fill out the lessons of the other languages, because the "Collaborate/Volunteer" section of the site shows the many contributions volunteers can make, such as "Translating", "Suggesting Words/Phrases" or "Contribute Your Voice". As the content of the site continues to expand, visitors can sign up for the "Newsletter" to be notified when major new content for a specific language has been added. Yammer - Private Social Network for Your Company

<https://www.yammer.com/>

Yammer is the leading real-time communication platform for companies, groups and organizations. Yammer began its life in December 2007 when their founders David Sacks and Adam Pisoni saw an opportunity to adapt Twitter's new approach to feeds, and instead apply it to improving workplace communication and collaboration. In September 2008 Yammer launched to the public during the TechCrunch50 Conference, and they were very honored to receive the grand prize despite strong competition from some great startups. A year later, Yammer crossed the 50,000 Yammer networks mark - with some household names among our top customers. Today, Yammer has grown considerably and is well-funded by Charles River Ventures, Founders Fund, Emergence Capital, and SV Angel's Ron Conway and Goldcrest Investments. Their passion is changing the way that people communicate at work, and making teams more connected and productive. Their mission is to become the real-time communication platform for companies, groups and organizations. Alliance for Aging Research

<http://www.agingresearch.org/>

The private, not-for-profit Alliance for Aging Research is the nation's leading citizen advocacy organization for improving the health and independence of Americans as they age. The Alliance was founded in 1986 to promote medical and behavioral research into the aging process. Since then, and as the explosion of the Senior Boom approaches, the Alliance has become the voice for Baby Boomer health by developing, implementing and advocating programs in research, professional and consumer health education and public policy. The Alliance For Aging Research believes that science can help people live longer, more productive lives. Greater access to the latest scientific information will empower people to take control of their own health, while educating them on the importance and need for further medical advances. From policy issues to consumer health programs, the Alliance works to generate knowledge and action on age-related issues. Simply speaking, we strive to advance science and enhance lives through a variety of activities and initiatives. The Alliance efforts have made aging research a fast growing priority for medical research today. Since the Alliance was formed in 1986, federal support for aging research has more than tripled, private research and development in aging-related health has reached an all time high, and new discoveries are making a lasting difference to the lives of millions of Americans. Remark Box - Keep Your Site's Feedback in Context

<http://www.remarkbox.com/>

Your site expresses your ideas. Some are short and some are long, some are business like, others are personal, yet others can just be code. Your visitors have thoughts about your ideas, whatever they may be. And such feedback is essential to improving your views on these ideas. Comments are fine, but both you and your visitors can lose important facts, especially if you express elaborate ideas or have long pages to fill. Stanford Engineering Everywhere (SEE)

<http://see.stanford.edu/>

For the first time in its history, Stanford is offering some of its most popular engineering classes free of charge to students and educators around the world. Stanford Engineering Everywhere (SEE) expands the Stanford experience to students and educators online. A computer and an Internet connection are all you need. View lecture videos, access reading lists and other course handouts, take quizzes and tests, and communicate with other SEE students, all at your convenience. SEE programming includes one of Stanford's most popular sequences: the three-course Introduction to Computer Science taken by the majority of Stanford's undergraduates and seven more advanced courses in artificial intelligence and electrical engineering. Stanford Engineering Everywhere offers: a) Anytime and anywhere access to complete lecture videos via streaming or downloaded media; b) Full course materials including syllabi, handouts, homework, and exams; c) Online social networking with fellow SEE students; d) Support for PCs, Macs and mobile computing devices. Stanford encourages fellow educators to use Stanford Engineering course materials in their own classrooms. RePEc (Research Papers in Economics)

<http://repec.org/>

RePEc (Research Papers in Economics) is a collaborative effort of hundreds of volunteers in 71 countries to enhance the dissemination of research in economics. The heart of the project is a decentralized database of working papers, journal articles and software components. All RePEc material is freely available. You may add your own materials to RePEc through a department or institutional archive -- all institutions are welcome to join and contribute their materials by establishing and maintaining their own RePEc archive. If your institution does not yet participate in RePEc, you may submit your own papers to MPRA (the Munich Personal RePEc Archive), and they will automatically be included in RePEc. RePEc does not support personal archives (only institutional archives). RePEc collaborates with the American Economic Association's EconLit database to provide content from leading universities' working paper series to EconLit. The RePEc database holds over 945,000 items of interest, over 815,000 of which are available online. This will be added to Academic and Scholar Search Engines and Sources White Paper. This has been added to the tools section of Research Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog.

AIS and Real Time Ship Observation

<http://www.MarineTraffic.com/>

This web site is part of an academic, open, community-based project. It is dedicated in collecting and presenting data which are exploited in research areas, such as: 1) Study of marine telecommunications in respect of efficiency and propagation parameters; 2) Simulation of vessel movements in order to contribute to the safety of navigation and to cope with critical incidents; 3) Interactive information systems design; 4) Design of databases providing real-time information; 5) Statistical processing of ports traffic with applications in operational research; 6) Design of models for the spotting of the origin of a pollution; 7) Design of efficient algorithms for sea path evaluation and for determining the estimated time of ship arrivals; 8) Correlation of the collected information with weather data; and 9) Cooperation with Institutes dedicated in the protection of the environment. It provides free real-time information to the public, about ship movements and ports, mainly across the coast-lines of Europe and N.America. The project is currently hosted by the Department of Product and Systems Design Engineering, University of the Aegean, Greece. The initial data collection is based on the Automatic Identification System (AIS). We are constantly looking for partners to take part in the community. They will have to install an AIS receiver and share the data of their area with us, in order to cover more areas and ports around the world. in60seconds - Explanations in 60 Seconds Animations

<http://in60seconds.nl/en/home.php>

in60seconds produces explanations, explanations in 60 seconds animations. Key role of their video's is communicating a complex message in a short amount of time. They work according to the '60 seconds' principal, which derives from the willingness of people to invest about one minute of their time to receive a message. They believe in the power of video as a means to convey information effectively. The combination of motion graphics, sound and voice-over makes it possible to communicate a large amount of information in a short time and with high impact. Beside that, people nowadays don't accept only textual information is presented. Producing a beautiful and fun "movie" is not their goal. The purpose of the video itself is what concerns them. Therefore they pay much attention to analyzing information, the intended audience and desired impact of the video. The result is a clear story in a measured and attractive visual style appropriate to the message and the underlying organization. eat the season - Whats Good to Eat This Week

<http://www.eattheseasons.com/>

With an increasingly urbanized population, awareness of when and where various foods are produced has dwindled. Imports from around the world ensure that supermarket shelves look the same week in week out. eat the seasons aims to promote an understanding of food seasons. Each week they list the seasonal foods that are at their peak, and share enlightening facts, useful tips and enticing recipe ideas picked from the web and their favourite books. Fruit and vegetables make up a large number of the foods they focus on, but seafood and meat are also featured. Given the climatic differences across North America they do not attempt a comprehensive listing of all local foods but instead focus on the main seasonal produce from across the region, whether that be Californian pomegranates or kohlrabi from Quebec. See food seasons for an explanation of how the seasons indicated relate to areas of North America, and refer to the incredibly useful Eat Well Guide for links to state-by-state listings of seasonal food. Ekikrat - India Information

<http://ekikrat.in/>

Ekikrat is a sanskrit word which means compilation (Resembles alot to Ekatrit which also means same). Ekikrat is supposed to fill an information void in Indian web space where there is very high signal to noise ratio. There are just too many voices with very little substantial factual information at one place. It is NOT a wikipedia and certainly not a community blog or social networking websites. Its hard to define it as it is in very early stage and there is alot to be done in terms of features but one thing for sure, Information will be at its core. Ekikrat is only targeted towards India and India related content and it will be like this for forever. British Academy - British National Academy for the Humanities and Social Sciences <http://www.britac.ac.uk/>

The British Academy is the UK's national body for the humanities and social sciences. Their purpose is to inspire, recognise and support excellence in the humanities and social sciences, throughout the UK and internationally, and to champion their role and value. As a Fellowship composed of nearly 900 distinguished scholars, they take a lead in representing the humanities and social sciences, facilitating international collaboration, providing an independent and authoritative source of advice, and contributing to public policy and debate. As a learned society, they seek to foster and promote the full range of work that makes up the humanities and social sciences, including inter- and multi-disciplinary work. As a funding body, in receipt of Government grant-in-aid, they support excellent ideas, individuals and intellectual resources in the humanities and social sciences. They enable UK researchers to work with scholars and resources in other countries, sustain a British research presence in various parts of the world and help to attract overseas scholars to the UK. As a national forum for the humanities and social sciences, they support a range of activities and publications (print and electronic), which aim to stimulate curiosity, to inspire and develop future generations of scholars, and to encourage appreciation of the social, economic and cultural value of these disciplines. Black Sea Monitor http://icbss.org/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=33&Itemid=47

The International Centre for Black Sea Studies (ICBSS) was founded in 1998 as a non-profit organization. It has since fulfilled a dual function. On the one hand, it is an independent research and training institution focusing on the wider Black Sea region. On the other hand, it is a related body of the Organization of the Black Sea Economic Cooperation (BSEC) and serves as its acknowledged think-tank. Thus the ICBSS is a uniquely positioned expert on the Black Sea area and its regional cooperation dynamics. Through all its activities, the ICBSS aims to foster multilateral cooperation among the BSEC member states as well as with their international partners. Black Sea Monitor aims to provide stakeholders and other interested parties around the globe with an exclusive information service. The Monitor offers brief commentaries and refers key documents, publications and events of interest that impact on the wider Black Sea region.

A World of Ideas - Academic Lecture Archive

<http://www.lecturesarchive.com/>

This site catalogues video and audio lectures on academic topics according to discipline, theoretician and topic. Most of the material here is from universities or radio stations. Links to various sites from which this material has been culled are available under "general sites." There are also some general sites for the specific disciplines listed under those discipline rubrics. Some of the links are directly to the video or audio data, others are to pages where the data must be sought. Both on this site and on numerous of the linked sites, you'll be well served by using your windows' search function. As always with classifications, there is a certain amount of ambiguity involved. In general, if you don't find an interdisciplinary scholar where you first look, then try another page. [A new version of the site is in the making with a general search function.] To access all of the material available here, you will need an assortment of media players: Real Player, Windows Media Player, and/or Quicktime Player, all of which are legally available free of charge online. While most of the data are in the form of streams, some download directly to your computer. If you have a slow connection, don't bother with those data. It will take much too long. Under "foreign languages," there are lectures in German and French. Some of the German sites have a mixture of lectures in English and German. This will be added to Tutorial Resources Subject Tracer™.

Urban Interns - A Place To Find Part Time Assistants

<http://www.urbaninterns.com/>

Urban Interns is an online marketplace that connects high-growth companies with talented candidates looking for internships, part-time jobs, freelance work and contract positions. They offer all of the ease and efficiency of a full-service job board, while focusing specifically on meeting the needs of growing companies, with just one catch; if you're looking for full-time employment, you'll best be served elsewhere. Why? a) Small businesses are growing quickly, but full-time help is often more (or more expensive) than what they need.; b) Talented people are looking for flexible, part-time work to gain experience, increase their earnings, or both; and c) Technology makes it easy to accomplish many tasks from anywhere, anytime. Urban Interns was created to meet the needs of the new job market. The world of work is no longer just “another day at the office.” This has been added to Employment Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog.

Participatory Learning and Action (PLA)

<http://www.planotes.org/index.html>

Participatory Learning and Action (PLA) is a leading series on participatory learning and action approaches and methods. It provides a forum for all those engaged in participatory work - community workers, activists and researchers - to share their experiences, conceptual reflections and methodological innovations with others. Most issues of Participatory Learning and Action have a special theme section, as well as a selection of general articles and regular features. Special issues draw on the expertise of guest editors to provide up-to-the minute accounts of the development and use of participatory methods in specific fields. The series is informal and seeks to publish frank accounts, address issues of practical and immediate value, encourage innovation and act as a voice from the field. We particularly welcome contributions from practitioners in the South. Participatory Learning and Action is available free of charge as an Open Access journal on the Internet. Content in PDF format in English and Arabic.

ReadFeeder - Discover Books That Experts and Influencers Are Passionate About

<http://www.thereadfeeder.com/>

ReadFeeder helps you discover books that experts and influencers are passionate about. More than the latest, the newest, the highest seller ... Books that matter. They scan 'expert' blogs, gather the books they're talking about and sort and list them. They sort them according to how many expert blogs have posted about the book, and then how many posts have been written about the book. A new way to find books - books interesting people are interested in talking about. Bloggers have shown us the way to so many great books, books that we would never have found otherwise. It's like knowing an expert on your favorite topics who wants to tell you what's worth reading and why. And it's not just the latest, newest books from the biggest publishers - what you'll find here is any book that made a person passionate enough to sit down and write about it. ReadFeeder then sorts the books according to how many expert and influential bloggers are blogging about it. Ski Track - Task Management and Collaboration Application

<http://skitrackapp.com/>

The hassle-free task management and collaboration app. Ski Track comes with no distractions of a typical task management software whatsoever. This means you'll have a lot less to get used to, and you can actually get more things done. With Ski Track, task management is fun. And why should it be any less fun than checking what you're friends are up to on Facebook, or catching the latest tweets on Twitter? They think people should see what their colleagues are up to as easily as seeing what they're friends are up to on Facebook. That's why in Ski Track, you'll see people's faces a lot. With faces, tasks are not something to be afraid of. They have also made navigation as fast as possible because we often found ourselves in a situation where our minds rushed faster than the browser — you just sit and wait for the page to load, and the super-awesome-genius idea that we just had... yes, where did it go? Law/Text/Culture

<http://ro.uow.edu.au/ltc/>

Law/Text/Culture is a journal committed to producing intersections of the law, textuality and all aspects of culture. It publishes work across a range of genres - from artwork to the traditional scholarly essay. It invites work which crosses borders - of genres and institutions, as well as disciplines and fields. The journal accepts work from people working outside and inside traditional educational and legal settings. Law/Text/Culture is particularly concerned with both law's textuality, that is, the specific textual forms by which the law circulates within a culture, and also the multiplicity of texts and subjects which the law touches and shapes, and which, in turn, impact on and change the law. This differentiates Law/Text/Culture from other interdisciplinary journals devoted to the fields of law and the humanities and law and literature. Manuscript submission via online system. Law/Text/Culture is available free of charge as an Open Access journal on the Internet. Abstracts available online. Articles available in PDF format.

USPTO Data Visualization Center

<http://www.uspto.gov/dashboards/patents/main.dashxml>

"Commerce's United States Patent and Trademark Office (USPTO) launched a beta version of the USPTO Data Visualization Center. This tool will give the public access to important data covering USPTO patent operations in a convenient dashboard format. The patents dashboard provides more refined pendency information than was previously available, as well as other critical indicators such as the number of applications in the backlog, production, staffing and more. This information will help the entire intellectual property (IP) community to better understand the USPTO's processes, and enable applicants to make more informed decisions about their applications, especially as the USPTO develops more opportunities for applicants to control the timing at which their applications are examined. The new dashboard, which will be updated monthly, will also be used internally by the USPTO to analyze and improve its examination process and to track the effectiveness of its improvement efforts. The USPTO also plans to add relevant data to track progress in other areas such as Trademarks and worksharing with global IP offices." Thanks to Sabrina I. Pacifici (<http://www.bespacific.com/>). PeerIndex - Discover the Authorities and Opinion Formers On a Given Topic

<http://www.peerindex.net/>

PeerIndex is a web technology company that is algorithmically mapping out the social web. The way we see it, the social web now allows everyone endless possibilities in discovering new information on people, places, and subjects. We believe that the traditional established authorities and experts - journalists, academics, are now joined by a range of interested and capable amateurs and professionals. As this locus of authority shifts, many new authorities emerge. PeerIndex wants to become the standard that identifies, ranks, and scores these authorities -- and help them benefit from the social capital they have built up. PeerIndex was founded in 2009 by Azeem Azhar, an Internet entrepreneur and investor who previously worked at the Economist and Guardian; Bill Emmott, former editor-in-chief of The Economist; and Ditlev Schwanenflugel, formerly of McKinsey & Co. <http://www.biomat.net/>

The "Biomaterials Resources on the Internet WebPage" was created in May 1998 and has considerably changed since then. In February 2000 it has become the Biomaterials Network, changing from the original collection of WWW links to an interactive source of information, where users can actively participate and communicate with each other. Membership to Biomat.net is free, and members can browse all of Biomat.net without charge. Since 2002, Biomat.net was selected for Current Web Contents, from the Institute for Scientific Information (ISI). At present, Biomat.net also manages the contents and upgrades the website of the European Society for Biomaterials (ESB), as a service provider. Biomat.net is aimed at linking the Biomaterials and Tissue Engineering community worldwide. This site provides updated news in the field, delivered through a monthly newsletter, and also a collection of selected internet links related to Biomaterials Science and Tissue Engineering, as well as relevant links to biomedical engineering, biology, medicine and health sciences in general. InterNano - Information Resources for the NanoManufacturing Community

<http://www.internano.org/>

InterNano is an information resource for the nanomanufacturing community. It is a service of the National Nanomanufacturing Network. InterNano supports the information needs of the nanomanufacturing community by bringing together resources about the advances in applications, devices, metrology, and materials that will facilitate the commercial development and/or marketable application of nanotechnology. InterNano both aggregates existing resources related to nanomanufacturing and creates original commentary on those resources, including news highlights, review and feature articles, and topical assessments of the current state of practice in nanomanufacturing. InterNano is not a source of original scientific research. Editorial oversight is provided by the National Nanomanufacturing Network. In addition, InterNano aims to facilitate the work of the NNN by generating a virtual community of nanomanufacturing researchers and practitioners through outreach and information sharing and to advance nanomanufacturing by partnering for the open sharing and analysis of data. Areas of coverage include:

- nanomanufacturing processes
- tools for nanomanufacturing
- nanoscale objects and nanostructured materials
- nanomanufacturing characterization techniques
- environmental, health and safety considerations for nanomanufacturing
- social and economic implications of nanomanufacturing
- informatics and standards for nanomanufacturing
- commercialization, regulation and intellectual property

<http://www.photometadata.org/>

Everyone involved with digital images shares the challenge of tracking and managing their rapidly expanding collections. Images with embedded information about their ownership and content are easier to find and harder to misuse. Metadata is the key to better protecting copyrights, promoting licensing, improving workflow, and managing assets. Unfortunately, it is under-used and under-supported. In partnership with the Library of Congress, the Stock Artists Alliance created the Photo Metadata Project to promote industry wide use of standardized photo metadata in every digital file. Through live events and online resources, we are committed to helping make this happen. Photographers need to embed photo metadata in their digital files, while stock distributors and end users need to take steps to ensure that this information will be preserved downstream as those files are processed, published online, copied, reproduced, licensed and archived. The mission of the SAA Photo Metadata Project is to help promote these best practices by investigating and reporting on the issues, and then developing online resources and educational events — demonstrating that embedding metadata in digital photos benefits us all and is easy to do. This initiative is made possible by the generous support of the Library of Congress, our Project Partners, a dedicated group of project contributors, and the commitment of the Stock Artists Alliance. Skepsi

<http://blogs.kent.ac.uk/skepsi/>

Skepsi is a peer reviewed online journal based in the School of European Culture and Languages at the University of Kent, and is entirely run by research students. Its aim is to honour the spirit of the School of European Culture and Languages, working hard to take advantage of its unique position as a crossroads in academic studies in Europe. Our hope is to develop collective thinking processes in the context of academic research, and to become a forum for European postgraduate researchers and postdoctoral scholars. Our title, Skepsi which originally means thought□in ancient Greek symbolizes our will to explore new areas and new methods in the traditional fields of academic research in the Humanities and Social Sciences. Originality and creativity in the approach of thought and of texts are crucial for us: to enhance and to promote these aspects will be our contribution to the tremendous range of existing academic publications. Skepsi is available free of charge as an Open Access journal on the Internet. Content available in PDF format.

JotOnce - New Simple Way To Exchange Information

<http://jotonce.com/>

Today you can email, message, post and follow; each method with varying degrees of visibility: a single person, a selective group of people, or the whole world. Now they add a new method: jotting. Write a simple note, protect it with a password, and share it with whoever you want, all the while knowing that your message is safe and encrypted. You're working with a group of people on a project and don't want to gather everyone's email address's. Just create a jot and tell them to go to jotOnce.com and enter in the selected password. Say you have to share a rather lengthy message that's too long to fit in a voicemail. Write a jot and leave them a voicemail saying to check jotOnce.com with the given password. Have a secret message to send to a friend but don't want to leave an email trail? Afraid of the privacy with other messaging methods? Write a jot. Abstract:

Gullibility is the principal cause of bubbles. Investors and the general public get snared by a "beautiful illusion" and throw caution to the wind. Attempts to identify and control bubbles are complicated by the fact that the authorities who might naturally be expected to take action have often (especially in recent years) been among the most gullible, and were cheerleaders for the exuberant behavior. Hence what is needed is an objective measure of gullibility. This paper argues that it should be possible to develop such a measure. Examples demonstrate, contrary to the efficient market dogma, that in some manias, even top business and technology leaders fall prey to collective hallucinations and become irrational in objective terms. During the Internet bubble, for example large classes of them first became unable to comprehend compound interest, and then lost even the ability to do simple arithmetic, to the point of not being able to distinguish 2 from 10. This phenomenon, together with advances in analysis of social networks and related areas, points to possible ways to develop objective and quantitative tools for measuring gullibility and other aspects of human behavior implicated in bubbles. It cannot be expected to infallibly detect all destructive bubbles, and may trigger false alarms, but it ought to alert observers to periods where collective investment behavior is becoming irrational. The proposed gullibility index might help in developing realistic economic models. It should also assist in illuminating and guiding decision-making.
