Awareness Watch™ Newsletter

By Marcus P. Zillman, M.S., A.M.H.A.

V8N6   June 2010

Welcome to the V8N6 June 2010 issue of the Awareness Watch™ Newsletter. This newsletter is available as a complimentary subscription and will be issued monthly. Each newsletter will feature the following:

Awareness Watch™ Featured Report
Awareness Watch™ Spotters
Awareness Watch™ Book/Paper/Article Review
Subject Tracer™ Information Blogs

I am always open to feedback from readers so please feel free to email with all suggestions, reviews and new resources that you feel would be appropriate for inclusion in an upcoming issue of Awareness Watch™. This is an ongoing work of creativity and you will be observing constant changes, constant updates knowing that "change" is the only thing that will remain constant!!

Awareness Watch™ Featured Report

This month's featured report is a special report on my latest research and the associated report/article that has been placed on line through my http://WhitePapers.us/ . The title of my report is Academic and Scholar Search Engines and Sources. This comprehensive report comprises hundreds of reliable sources to assist you in identifying the best academic and scholar search engines available from the Internet. Each resource is listed along with description and direct URL to access from the Internet. The information is taken from my constantly updated and expanded annotated white paper titled Academic and Scholar Search Engines and Sources and available directly online at:

PARSE.Insight - Permanent Access to the Records of Science in Europe
http://www.parse-insight.eu/
PARSE.Insight is a two-year project co-funded by the European Union under the Seventh Framework Programme. It is concerned with the preservation of digital information in science, from primary data through analysis to the final publications resulting from the research. The problem is how to safeguard this valuable digital material over time, to ensure that it is accessible, usable and understandable in future. The rapid pace of change in information technology threatens media, file formats and software with obsolescence, and changing concepts and terminology also mean that, even if data can be read, it might not be correctly interpreted by future generations.

Permanent Access to the Records of Science in Europe (PARSE)

ThoughtMesh - Publishing and Discovering Scholarly Papers Online
http://thoughtmesh.net/
ThoughtMesh is an unusual model for publishing and discovering scholarly papers online. It gives readers a tag-based navigation system that uses keywords to connect excerpts of essays published on different Web sites. Add your essay to the mesh, and ThoughtMesh gives you a traditional navigation menu plus a tag cloud that enables nonlinear access to text excerpts. You can navigate across excerpts both within the original essay and from related essays distributed across the mesh.

Xstructure - arXiv Search
http://xstructure.inr.ac.ru/arXiv ePrint Archive from Cornell University is Open access to 525,110 e-prints in Physics, Mathematics, Computer Science, Quantitative Biology, Quantitative Finance and Statistics. Among the features of Xstructure are: a) Automated generation of hierarchical classification scheme for the papers. The scheme results from classification of the papers in the arxiv database. The only input for the classification is the citation graph. The number of the levels in the hierarchy and the number of the clusters is determined by the algorithm. The algorithm creates the classification scheme, and indexes the papers by the created classification; b) The classification is used to index the new papers. We plan to rebuild the classification scheme regularly. In this way, we will take into account that appearance of new papers may lead to emergence of new themes. Detection of new themes is one of our objectives; c) A number of extra attributes (e.g. Theme name, Authority and Review Articles, etc.) for the elements (themes) of the classification (see Help); and d) Accessability of the classification in response to search requests via display options, e.g., display as Tree of Themes, and Refrerence (Citation) Tree. About 10% of papers from arxiv are missed in their database.

Awareness Watch™ Spotters

Five Second Test - Simple Usability Tests
http://fivesecondtest.com/
Five second tests are simple usability tests that help you measure the effectiveness of your designs. Conducting a five second test allows you to find out which parts of your designs are the most prominent. You can do this in two ways: a) You give users five seconds to look at your design and then ask them to remember specific elements, and b) You give users five seconds to locate and click on specific elements of your design. All you need to do is upload a design you want to test and choose the type of test you want to run. You will be given a unique link that you can share with friends and colleagues and have them do your test. Of course, you can always just let our random users do your test for really fast feedback! This has been added to Accessibility Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog.

Navflow - Quick and Easy Navigation Testing for Your Mocks and Wireframes
http://www.navflow.com/
Navflow is a usability test for designers that helps analyze how people navigate around your applications and websites. Navflow lets you upload a series of images that represent a path your users would take to get from one section to another. You can choose whether you want their community to help you out or keep your test private and only share it with your own testers. They crunch all your responses and present them to you with beautiful funnel visualizations, heatmaps and graphs. This has been added to Accessibility Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog.

Semigroup Forum
http://www.springer.com/math/algebra/journal/233
This journal serves as a platform for the speedy and efficient transmission of information on current research in semigroup theory. Coverage in the journal includes: algebraic semigroups, topological semigroups, partially ordered semigroups, semigroups of measures and harmonic analysis on semigroups, transformation semigroups, semigroups of operators, and applications of semigroup theory to other disciplines such as ring theory, category theory, automata, and logic. Semigroup Forum features survey and research articles. It also contains research announcements, which describe new results, mostly without proofs, of full length papers appearing elsewhere as well as short notes, which detail such information as new proofs, significant generalizations of known facts, comments on unsolved problems, and historical remarks. In addition, the journal contains research problems; announcements of conferences, seminars, and symposia on semigroup theory; abstracts and bibliographical items; as well as listings of books, papers, and lecture notes of interest.

Newsmap - Visual Google News Aggregator
http://newsmap.jp/
Newsmap is an application that visually reflects the constantly changing landscape of the Google News news aggregator. A treemap visualization algorithm helps display the enormous amount of information gathered by the aggregator. Treemaps are traditionally space-constrained visualizations of information. Newsmap's objective takes that goal a step further and provides a tool to divide information into quickly recognizable bands which, when presented together, reveal underlying patterns in news reporting across cultures and within news segments in constant change around the globe. Newsmap's objective is to simply demonstrate visually the relationships between data and the unseen patterns in news media. Google News automatically groups news stories with similar content and places them based on algorithmic results into clusters. In Newsmap, the size of each cell is determined by the amount of related articles that exist inside each news cluster that the Google News Aggregator presents. In that way users can quickly identify which news stories have been given the most coverage, viewing the map by region, topic or time. Through that process it still accentuates the importance of a given article. Newsmap also allows to compare the news landscape among several countries, making it possible to differentiate which countries give more coverage to, for example, more national news than international or sports rather than business. Cpedia (alpha) — The Automated Encyclopedia From Cuil
http://www.cpedia.com/
Traditionally, search engines have returned a list of references in response to a query — ten blue links. Cpedia changes this. A natural way for people to receive information is a report — a summary of the topic. Current search results are more analogous to receiving a bibliography than a sourced report. For each query, Cpedia algorithmically summarizes and clusters the ideas on the web and uses this to generate a report. We do the heavy lifting of removing all the repetition, so that unique and novel content surfaces. Just as Wikipedia uses the effort of a large number of people to edit a topic, we combine all the documents written about an idea on the web to generate one article. There are many surprising relationships on the web… but one warning, not everything people say on the web is true. Solutions Journal http://www.thesolutionsjournal.com/
Solutions is a nonprofit publication that aims to showcase ideas for solving the world's environmental, social, and political problems. The aim of Solutions is to encourage and publish integrative solutions to the world's most pressing problems: climate disruption, loss of biodiversity, poverty, energy descent, overfishing, air, water, and soil pollution, and human population growth, to name a few. There is already plenty of discussion about these problems, along with an abundance of isolated and technical solutions, some of which may prove to be extremely valuable. Solutions is a forum for putting the pieces together, prompting intelligent discussion of what can be done, and what should be done. Solutions is an online and print journal, a hybrid between a popular magazine and a peer-reviewed journal. It is intended for a broad audience that reaches beyond traditional academic journals to the informed public. It will provide a much-needed forum, devoted to whole-system solutions and the design of an integrated human and natural world. Solutions Journal is available free of charge as an Open Access journal on the Internet. This has been added to Green Files Subject Tracer™ Information Blog.

DOE Green Energy
http://www.osti.gov/greenenergy
Green energy-related research and development (R&D) results are now more easily accessible through a new online portal, DOE Green Energy. The free public portal was launched on the 40th Anniversary of Earth Day by the U.S. Department of Energy(DOE)

Office of Scientific and Technical Information(OSTI) within the Office of Science. The site is designed to ease access to green energy R&D information for use by researchers, scientists, educators, students and the general public. Researchers can use the DOE Green Energy portal to speed scientific discovery and innovation; business and industry can use the R&D to stimulate economic growth related to renewable energy. Educators, students, and the public can discover applications of renewable energy science and energy efficiency best practices. The portal provides technical documents from thousands of R&D projects conducted at DOE National Laboratories and by DOE-funded awards at universities. The DOE Green Energy portal is part of the DOE Open Government Plan, which furthers the Administration's Open Government Initiative. DOE Green Energy contains both current and historical research, including bibliographic citations, technical reports and patent information on different types of renewable energy resources and energy conservation. Subject areas include but are not limited to solar, wind, bioenergy, hydroelectric, geothermal, tidal and wave power, and energy storage. An easy-to-use search box allows users to selectively download, at no cost, DOE bibliographic citations and associated detailed full-text research reports and patents focusing on renewable energy and energy efficiency science and technology. The website also includes a news feed provided by the DOE Energy Efficiency and Renewable Energy program. This latest DOE Office of Scientific and Technical Information collection searches results representing more than a $10 billion R&D investment. OSTI advances science and sustains technological creativity by making R&D findings available and useful to DOE researchers and the public. The scope of the articles will include behavioral models (quantitative-qualitative), decision-making techniques and procedures, estimation models, demand-supply analysis, monitoring systems, expert systems and performance evaluation, assessment of site and destination attractiveness, new analytical tools, research methods and related areas such as validity and reliability, scale development, development of data collection instruments, methodological issues in cross-national and cross-cultural studies, and computer technology and use.

CiteHealth - Healthcare Providers Reviews and Ratings
http://citehealth.com/
CiteHealth is a health care ratings website for consumers to evaluate their health care providers quality in an effort to enable them to make informed decisions about medical care they may be receiving. They accomplish this by providing free reports on health care providers and communities and also by providing a vehicle for patients to convey their experiences and questions to one another. The information contained on each health provider comes from numerous government and commercial sources, direct contact, and from the user base. They currently cover hospitals, nursing homes, dialysis centers, home care agencies, rehabilitation centers, pharmacies, and medical providers. Features include: 1) Provide all information for free; 2) Display every relevant piece of data; 3) Compare attributes of each provider against other providers and locations; 4) Organize information so it's easy to use, access, and reference (i.e. no multiple pages, no logins, and no hurdles to get to the reports); 5) Display information in a number of different formats (i.e. graphs, sentences, lists); 6) Create indexes that intelligently combine key attributes; 7) Provide rich media content such as maps, pictures, audio, and more; 8) Deliver numerous tools to our users, all at no cost; 9) Allow mechanisms for community and sharing; 10) Let you give your feedback and take part in shaping the information; and 11) They "partner with and help" and don't "sell to" the providers they cover. HyperOffice - Online Business Collaboration Software

http://www.hyperoffice.com/
Founded in 1998, HyperOffice is a recognized leader in the white-hot online communication and collaboration solutions industry for small to mid sized businesses. Our mission is to empower growing organizations with technology traditionally available only to large enterprises, and help them achieve business growth, competitive advantage and success. Having spent more than ten years offering online collaboration solutions, HyperOffice was one of the first companies to offer software-as-a-service - the buzzword in information technology today, and widely hailed as the future of corporate software. Since its inception, more than 300,000 users worldwide have harnessed the power of HyperOffice. HyperOffice aims at bringing messaging and collaboration technologies traditionally available to large enterprises, to growing organizations through the SaaS, on-demand model. HyperOffice 'out of the box' solutions allow customers to do what they do best, and reap the benefits of robust functionality without any technical know how and high upfront costs. Moreover, they can get started almost immediately with just an internet connection, without having to go through long implementation cycles, invest in expensive IT infrastructure, or hire expert staff for ongoing maintenance. Our integrated suite of online tools covers the entire range of productivity needs that exist in every organization - business email, contact management, calendaring, document management, intranet and extranet workspaces, forums, web conferencing, online databases, web forms and much more. Gene Expression http://www.cognizantcommunication.com/filecabinet/Gene/gene.htm
The Molecular and Cellular Biology area of Gene Expression covers all aspects of the gene including it structure, functions, and regulation in prokaryotes, eukaryotes, and viruses; molecular and cell biological aspects of cell growth and development, chromatin structure and function. These include topics such as DNA replication, DNA repair, gene transcription, transcriptional control, RNA processing, posttranscriptional control, oncogenes, molecular mechanisms of action of hormones, molecular mechanism of cellular differentiation, growth and development, protein synthesis, and posttranslational control. The Molecular and Cellular Neuroscience area of Gene Expression covers all aspects of gene expression as described but is devoted exclusively to the nervous system in health and disease. Topics include studies of neurogenesis, development, aging, and neurodegeneration. Complex neural systems, motor control, special senses, and higher cortical function, when viewed from the perspective of gene expression, are appropriate for the journal. Research related to molecular mechanisms of drug tolerance, dependence, and withdrawal are solicited. Manuscripts on state-of-the-art methods and protocols for molecular profiling of neuronal structure and function are welcome. FedThread - Interacting With the Federal Register http://www.fedthread.org/FedThread is a new way of interacting with the Federal Register. FedThread gives you:
a) collaborative annotation: Attach a note to any paragraph of the Federal Register; start a conversation; b) advanced search: Search the Federal Register (back to 2000) on full text, by date, agency, or other fields; and c) customized feeds: Turn any search into an RSS or email feed; FedThread notifies you when new items match your search query. The Federal Register is "the official daily publication for rules, proposed rules, and notices of Federal agencies and organizations, as well as executive orders and other presidential documents." It's published by the U.S. government, five days a week. The Federal Register tells you what your government is doing, in a lot more detail than you get from the news media. FedThread is possible because of the government's new XML-format Federal Register, a milestone in technology-based civic engagement that lets citizens create new services that in turn provide value back to government. BIO-Complexity

http://bio-complexity.org/ojs/index.php/main/index
BIO-Complexity is a peer-reviewed scientific journal with a unique goal. It aims to be the leading forum for testing the scientific merit of the claim that intelligent design (ID) is a credible explanation for life. Because questions having to do with the role and origin of information in living systems are at the heart of the scientific controversy over ID, these topicsâ€"viewed from all angles and perspectives are central to the journal's scope. To achieve its aim, BIO-Complexity is founded on the principle of critical exchange that makes science work. Specifically, the journal enlists editors and reviewers with scientific expertise in relevant fields who hold a wide range of views on the merit of ID, but who agree on the importance of science for resolving controversies of this kind. Our editors use expert peer review, guided by their own judgment, to decide whether submitted work merits consideration and critique. BIO-Complexity aims not merely to publish work that meets this standard, but also to provide expert critical commentary on it. BIO-Complexity publishes studies in all areas of science with clear relevance to its aim, including work focusing on the relative merit of any of the principal alternatives to ID (neo-Darwinism, self-organization, evolutionary developmental biology, etc.). Among the topics of interest are: the origin or characterization of complex biological sequences, structures, forms, functions and processes; pre-biotic chemistry and the origin of life; molecular or morphologic phylogenies and phylogenetic methods; new molecular or morphologic data including paleontological data; cladistics and systematics; biomimetic or engineering analyses of biological systems; in vitro and laboratory evolution; evolutionary simulation and computational evolution. Theoretical or mathematical treatments of complexity or information with clear relevance to the journal's aims are also welcome. Although philosophical works will not be included as Research Articles, the subject matter does call for occasional articles of a more reflective nature. These will typically be invited contributions from authors whose opinions are judged to be of broad interest, which will be published as Critical Reviews. BIO-Complexity will consider for publication only work that adheres to widely accepted modes of scientific investigation and inference. BIO-Complexity is available free of charge as an Open Access journal on the Internet. Abstracts available online. Articles available in PDF format.

GNOSS - Connect Intelligence and Interests
http://www.gnoss.com/GNOSS is web site for the development of the socio-digital life created by RIAM Intelearning LAB S.L. In GNOSS, both semantic web and social web technologies converge. GNOSS provides people, groups and organizations with the necessary tools to create and develop their digital identity, connect their intelligences, create communities based on their interests and motivations, and activate robust processes of collective creativity, intelligence, deliberation and thinking. GNOSS is a semantic site that: a) Expresses and connects the multiplicity of the different points of view of the users on the documents and ideas they share; b) Enables to give meaning collaboratively to the contents incorporated to GNOSS and generates information about them (i+i or information on information); c) Promotes the tagging of the knowledge in a standard or denotative way; and d) Enables people, organizations and groups to depict, discover, share and distribute knowledge on any type of format. Specifically, GNOSS makes possible the creation of contents semantically represented thanks to its engine for creating semantic forms. In conclusion, GNOSS tries to develop a more simple and robust Web with a more sophisticated representation of the knowledge, a Web that enables people and groups to build and enjoy a socio-digital life space that broadens and increases their possibilities of relation, deliberation, creation and social interaction. This universe of relationships in GNOS is organized around three main spaces: 1) GNOSS communities: It is the social site of people connected through interests. It represents the social life of a community or society in the net; 2) MyGNOSS: It is the private site of a person. It represents the world of social relationships of a person in the net; and 3) GNOSS Organiza: it is the social site of organizations and people making them up. It represents the social life of an organization in the net. This has been added to the tools section of Research Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog. International Development Planning Review (IDPR)
http://www.liverpool-unipress.co.uk/html/publication.asp?idProduct=3597 International Development Planning Review's (IDPR) editorial policy is to reflect international development planning policy and practice. This includes a focus on the physical, economic and social conditions of urban and rural populations. The journal explores current national and international policy agendas, achievements and strategies in this area, offering material of interest to its established academic and professional readership as well as to a broader critical audience. IDPR publishes a breadth of material in areas including:

* the use and development of resources and energy
* shelter
* communications
* transport
* technical cooperation and planning policy
* rural development
* planning methodology
* demographic change
* planning and development education
* finance

* theories and ideas of development

IDPR encourages shorter contributions alongside the traditional content of substantial scholarly papers: these include professional and research notes, and technical reports. 'Debate' and 'Viewpoint' features have opened the way to the publication of personal views and readers' responses. Conference reports will continue to appear from time to time and we have published a number of special thematic issues in recent volumes. The Book Review section is an important part of the journal, and the Editors also welcome proposals for longer book review articles.

The Chesapeake Project - Government, Policy and Legal Information Archived at Georgetown Law Library

Our Blocks - Building Blocks for Building Communities
http://ourblocks.net/Building blocks for building communities includes: a) Our purpose is to provide a ready reference for people who want to work (and play) together to make a difference in their neighborhoods; b) We focus on communicating information that people can use to improve their neighborhoods and their relationships with their neighbors; c) We summarize the best material that's already out there, and try to make them more acessible (shorter, mobile-readable) and richer (f.e. by using tags & links); d) We collect stories of ordinary people doing extraordinary things for their neighborhoods. (Some of us learn better through stories than through technical stuff); e) Theory is good, but we like practice (lessons learned, case studies, best practices); f) We try to distill the material so as to highlight ideas that have been tested, whether they worked or not and g) With your help, we maintain a list of online libraries and resources that are available to the public, for free. Have a Say At Me - Tool for Anonymous Personal Feedback

http://sayat.me/
This is a free service that you can use to gather sincere and honest feedback from people you know, or give that feedback to others. Here, the feedback is written anonymously. That allows any kind of feedback. For example, people can say out things they'd like to say to you but are afraid to do it, being worried about your reaction on them. The feedback doesn't have to be negative. The most important is, that the feedback would be honest and sincere. If you write feedback to others, it can be anything -- what you think is good at the other person that he/she should keep up in your opinion, what you think he/she could improve or avoid in your opinion. Anything honest. Just anything that would be useful that you think the other person should know. If you get that kind of feedback yourself, that would help you to verify your own self-image that might be true, but also might differ a lot of what other people see in you. Take sayat.me as a kind of tool to get input information for your self-development. This has been added to the tools section of Research Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog.

Help a Startup Out Classified Site (HASO)
http://helpastartupout.com/
Help a Startup Out (HASO) was born out of [Startup Digest] the mailing list of startup events with 38 issues worldwide. Because we were email based we were getting barraged with requests about feedback, finding employees, what service providers to use, and yes even where to find dates in Silicon Valley. The truth is we couldn't keep up with all of the requests and created the first issue of HASO to help the worldwide startup community to help each other out. Since our first issue we couldn't keep up with the demand of our audience and have launched HASO to be the classified site for startups to post their needs and get help from the startup community around them. AnswerBlip - Your Questions, Your Answers http://www.answerblip.com/
Do you have questions about movies, technology, business, computers, or celebrities? Do you read alot of articles, magazines, or books and have a head full of useless trivia knowledge? Put that information to use by helping someone else get the answer they are searching for, or just brush up on your quiz trivia and fun facts for trivia nights with friends and family. Each week they gather thousands of your popular questions, new trivia categories, and interesting facts and post them in their trivia archive for the community to answer. This is not your traditional trivia website because the questions, answers, and facts are submitted and decided on by the community. Most of the answers are short blips, so you get your answer quick and with minimal reading. They also have in depth discussion articles which are fun or serious questions and articles about stories in the news or that people want to talk about. These article discussions have a longer explanation and more in depth answers. This has been added to Internet Experts Subject Tracer™ Information Blog.

Edistorm - Brainstorming Without the Bored Room
http://www.edistorm.com/
At the end of a traditional brainstorming session, someone takes a picture of the boardroom wall and then either tasks someone to transcribe the chaos or more likely, email the photo out to everyone. Next time you goto revisit the issue, you end up starting from scratch wasting time, money and ideas. Edistorm allows you to work on your ideas during a structured brainstorming session but the storm is available 24/7 and can be referred to, added to and revised on an ongoing basis. We have calendars to store events, address books to store contacts, yet we don't have a place to store ideas. We've all stored ideas in emails to ourself, on scraps of paper or notebooks we can never find, or worse yet forgot them. Edistorm is an always available idea database to store, retrieve, share and get feedback to build on your ideas. Edistorm allows you to organize your ideas in a real time interactive wall. Each sticky can have it's own color and the users decide what the arrangement means to them. This freeform method of organizing ideas will feel familiar to anyone that has thrown stickies on their walls. Research has proven that groups of users can make better decisions than a single user. Because your not limited by the size of your boardroom or the ability to facilitate brainstorming with a group larger than a dozen, you can engage your entire organization in coming up with better ideas. Each employee can add ideas, vote on the ones they like and make comments on specific ideas to help refine or improve them. Edistorm is always free for anyone adding ideas to a brainstorming. Feel free to invite anyone you'd like. Creating public or solo brainstorms is free, while creating private invite only storms requires a subscription. Even if you're brainstorming by yourself, you're never on your own. Edistorm created Idea Bots that brainstorm with you providing you suggested ideas. Edistorm has a variety of bots including, thesaurus, rhyming, related words and a social media bot. We're open to suggestions for future bots. The name Edistorm is a mashup of Edison and Brainstorm and is inspired by Thomas Edison's idea factories. Edistorm is a privately held company based in Edmonton, Alberta, Canada. More Words - Search Dictionary, Word Games Crosswords and Anagrams

http://www.morewords.com/
Find dictionary words for crossword puzzles, code words and word games like Scrabble®, Upwords® and Jamble. More Words is a way to search word lists. It's a crossword puzzle solver, anagram lister, codeword decoder, and a helper for other word games. You can use it to find words (optionally of a specific length) that start with, end with, or contain certain letters. The words are from the Enable2k North American word list used in well-known word games. This contains 173,528 words which are mostly US spellings, with some words from other forms of English (such as British). The complete list is public domain and is available to download (1.7MB, one word per line, no definitions). Because this is a wordlist created especially for word games, it does not contain any hyphenated words, abbreviations, acronyms, or proper nouns (capitalized words). It also does not contain single-letter words such as "I". Words that have accents are listed without the accents (for example soupçon is shown as soupcon). Watch™ Paper Review

Video pollution on the Web by Fabricio Benevenuto, Tiago Rodrigues, Virgílio A.F. Almeida, Jussara Almeida, Marcos Gonçalves, and Keith Ross
http://www.uic.edu/htbin/cgiwrap/bin/ojs/index.php/fm/article/view/2751

Abstract:
Videos have become a predominant part of users' daily lives on the Web, especially with the emergence of video sharing services, such as YouTube. Part of the huge success of multimedia content in the Web is due to the change on the user perspective from content consumer to content creator. However, by allowing users to publicize their independently generated content, video sharing networks become susceptible to different types of pollution. As example, users can pollute the system spreading video messages containing undesirable content. Users can also associate metadata with videos in attempt to fool video search engines (i.e., popular tags, but unrelated to the content). Moreover, users can upload identical videos, generating duplicates of the same content on the system. Such pollution compromises not only the user satisfaction, but it also consumes system resources and can impact negatively aspects related to infrastructure. In this work we provide a general overview of pollution in video sharing systems. We define the different kinds of existent pollution, their negative impact to users and system and possible strategies to minimize the problem.
