American Economic Alert - Trade News and Opinions

<http://www.americaneconomicalert.org/>

AmericanEconomicAlert.org was founded by the U.S. Business and Industry Council Educational Foundation, a 501(c)(3) not-for-profit research and educational organization dedicated to improving the American people's awareness of critical public policy issues in such diverse fields as trade, taxation, education, health care, foreign relations, defense, and national security, among others. USBICEF is affiliated with the U.S. Business and Industry Council, a 501(c)(6) non-profit business association. The U.S. Business and Industry Council is a national organization of business owners and executives dedicated to making the U.S. domestic economy the world's leading engine of economic growth. The USBIC Educational Foundation is its research arm. Only a robust national economy, balanced in capabilities and dynamic in operation, can provide the material base for an American society that is stable at home and secure in the world.

BankTracker - Investigating Reporting Workshop

<http://banktracker.investigativereportingworkshop.org/>

The unprecedented bet that many banks made on mortgages, real estate development and other real estate-related lending during the middle part of this decade has produced a payoff no one imagined just a few years ago -- a huge increase in loan defaults, a soaring number of foreclosures and a plunge in bank profits. And now, an analysis of bank financial statements by the Investigative Reporting Workshop and msnbc.com, sheds new light on just how dangerous conditions have become in many banks across the nation. The analysis is based on reports every bank is required to file each quarter with the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., the federal agency that protects deposits and is part of the bank regulatory system. The Investigative Reporting Workshop, a project of the School of Communication at American University, intends to address this fundamental issue for democracy in two important ways: a) By conducting significant investigative journalism projects on a national and international scale; and b) By researching and experimenting with new models for creating and delivering investigative projects.

Beige Book - Current Economic Conditions by Federal Reserve District

<http://www.federalreserve.gov/FOMC/BeigeBook/2011/>

Commonly known as the Beige Book, this report is published eight times per year. Each Federal Reserve Bank gathers anecdotal information on current economic conditions in its District through reports from Bank and Branch directors and interviews with key business contacts, economists, market experts, and other sources. The Beige Book summarizes this information by District and sector. An overall summary of the twelve district reports is prepared by a designated Federal Reserve Bank on a rotating basis.

Benton Foundation - Using Technology and Innovation To Address Our Nation's Critical Challenges

<http://www.benton.org/>

The mission of the Benton Foundation is to articulate a public interest vision for the digital age and to demonstrate the value of communications for solving social problems.

Bureau of Economic Analysis (BEA) U.S. Department of Commerce

<http://www.bea.gov/index.htm>

BEA strives to provide the most timely, relevant and accurate economic data to you, their users, to help promote a better understanding of the U.S. economy. These reliable and consistent measures of economic activity are essential to the informed decision making of policymakers, business leaders and every American household. The success of their statistical programs, in large part, is determined by the trust in the quality of their data. As one of the world's leading statistical agencies, they are dedicated to staying on the cutting edge of the economy. To help keep you informed on a number of non-statistical issues, their Director's Page provides a number of useful pieces of information. The 5-year BEA Strategic Plan is available for your review as well as a report card of their successes in meeting the over 200 annual milestones in the Plan. Information on the President's current budget request for BEA also is available. Congressional testimony related to BEA and its statistical programs will be included to keep you current on important topics being considered by Congress. Finally, other important reports and information can be found to keep you informed on ongoing activities and plans at BEA.

Business Dynamics Statistics, BDS

http://www.ces.census.gov/index.php/bds/bds\_home

The new Business Dynamics Statistics are a product of the Center for Economic Studies of the U.S. Census Bureau. The annual series describes establishment-level business dynamics along dimensions absent from similar databases including firm age and firm size. The new data series provides researchers with a tool to gain insight into the dynamics of a changing economy. Business Dynamics Statistics are created from the Longitudinal Business Database (LBD), a confidential database available to researchers throughout the network of Census Research Data Centers. The BDS was developed by the U.S. Census Bureau, and partially funded by the Kauffman Foundation. The BDS is unique in that its source data are longitudinal in nature and permit tracking establishments and firms over time. The public use files are created in an effort to make these data accessible to a broad range of data users. Other efforts currently under way include the creation of a fully synthetic microdata file based on the LBD. The BDS series provides annual statistics for 1976-2005 by firm age and firm size. Annual files are also provided at the state level, for Standard Industrial Classification sectors and for the economy as a whole.

Business Intelligence Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog

A overall view of the latest economic indicators presented by the Census Bureau along with Economic Indicator Calendar and Census Bureau Economic Programs.

Center for Economic and Policy Research (CEPR)

<http://www.cepr.net/>

The Center for Economic and Policy Research (CEPR) was established in 1999 to promote democratic debate on the most important economic and social issues that affect people's lives. In order for citizens to effectively exercise their voices in a democracy, they should be informed about the problems and choices that they face. CEPR is committed to presenting issues in an accurate and understandable manner, so that the public is better prepared to choose among the various policy options. Toward this end, CEPR conducts both professional research and public education. The professional research is oriented towards filling important gaps in the understanding of particular economic and social problems, or the impact of specific policies. The public education portion of CEPR's mission is to present the findings of professional research, both by CEPR and others, in a manner that allows broad segments of the public to know exactly what is at stake in major policy debates. An informed public should be able to choose policies that lead to an improving quality of life, both for people within the United States and around the world.

ChangeTracker - Tracking Change In Washington

<http://www.propublica.org/feature/changetracker>

ChangeTracker, an experimental new tool that watches pages on a) whitehouse.gov, b) recovery.gov and c) financialstability.gov so you don't have to. When the White House adds or deletes anything— say a blog post, or executive order ... ChangeTracker will let you know. The latest changes are on their page or sign up to get alerts sent to you. Each change links to a page that shows the different versions side-by-side. Text highlighted in red means it was removed, green means it was added.

CitySourced - Mobile Civic Engagement Platform

<http://www.citysourced.com/>

CitySourced is a real time mobile civic engagement platform. CitySourced provides a free, simple, and intuitive platform empowering residents to identify civic issues (public safety, quality of life, & environmental issues, etc.) and report them to city hall for quick resolution; an opportunity for government to use technology to save time and money plus improve accountability to those they govern; and a positive, collaborative platform for real action. A picture tells a thousand works and CitySourced makes it snap.

ClearSpending - Making Sense of the Federal Checkbook

<http://sunlightfoundation.com/clearspending/>

They have taken data from other federal reporting systems and compared it with the data found in USASpending.gov across three categories: Consistency, Completeness and Timeliness. How close are the reported dollar amounts to the yearly estimates? How many of the required fields are filled out in each record? And how long did it take the agency to report the money once it was allocated to a project?

Data.gov

<http://www.Data.gov/>

The purpose of Data.gov is to increase public access to high value, machine readable datasets generated by the Executive Branch of the Federal Government. Although the initial launch of Data.gov provides a limited portion of the rich variety of Federal datasets presently available, they invite you to actively participate in shaping the future of Data.gov by suggesting additional datasets and site enhancements to provide seamless access and use of your Federal data. Data.gov includes a searchable data catalog that includes access to data in two ways: through the "raw" data catalog and using tools. As a priority Open Government Initiative for President Obama's administration, Data.gov increases the ability of the public to easily find, download, and use datasets that are generated and held by the Federal Government. Data.gov provides descriptions of the Federal datasets (metadata), information about how to access the datasets, and tools that leverage government datasets. The data catalogs will continue to grow as datasets are added. Federal, Executive Branch data are included in the first version of Data.gov.

DataMasher - State Data - Mash It

<http://www.datamasher.org/>

How do the States Compare? Mash up some government data to find out! The Federal Government produces an immeasurable amount of data each day. DataMasher helps citizens with that data by creating mashups to visualize them in different ways and see how states compare on important issues. Users can combine different data sets in interesting ways and create their own custom rankings of the states.

Debategraph - The Global Debate Map

<http://debategraph.org/>

Debategraph helps groups collaborate in thinking through complex issues by building and sharing interactive maps of domains of knowledge from multiple perspectives. Their public service goal is to make the best arguments on all sides of any public debate freely available to all and continuously open to challenge and improvement by all. Debategraph is a wiki debate visualization tool that lets you: a) map the strongest case on any issue that matters to you; b) openly engage and learn from opposing views in a transparent, multi-perspective dialogue; c) create and reshape maps of the conversation as it develops, make new points, rate and filter the arguments; d) keep track of the maps via email and RSS feeds; and, e) share and embed the maps around the web.

Deep Web Research and Discovery Resources

<http://www.DeepWebResearch.com/>

<http://www.DeepWeb.us/>

Deep Web Research Subject Tracer™ Information Blog constantly monitors the Internet for the latest deep web resources and sources available and then lists them alphabetically in an ongoing information blog with a direct link to the source. It is divided into the following sections: a) Articles, Papers, Forums, Audios and Videos; b) Cross Database Articles; c) Cross Database Search Services; d) Cross Database Search Tools; e) Peer to Peer, File Sharing, Grid and Matrix Search Engines Presentations; f) Resources - Deep Web Research; g) Resources - Semantic Web Research; and h) Current Subject Tracer™ Information Blogs

DemocracyMap - Database of Government Jurisdictions/Entities, Their Websites, and Elected Officials Contact Information

<http://pages.e-democracy.org/DemocracyMap>

Plan and build a universal, free, open, shared and continuously updated database of government jurisdictions/entities, their websites, and over time add elected official contact information. In the United States there are approximately 30,000 government jurisdictions. There is no official database of the websites tied to each jurisdiction be it a city, school district, or some relatively obscure special district. Business.Gov, an effort of the Small Business Administration, recently released an API with 8,000 or so city and county websites raising interest across many organizations in how to cover ALL government organizations. Once collecting and maintaining a directory of all government jurisdiction web addresses and a way to find your jurisdiction by entering a street address or by using a map is addressed, then deepening data collection to elected officials and all government owned or funded websites will be explored.

The purpose of this site and process is to facilitate the identification, discovery, and formation of communities of practice (CoPs) around emerging technology (ET) components and specifications of interest to government agencies. The process consists of eight stages.

EveryBlock - Geographic Filter Newsfeed of Your Neighborhood

<http://www.everyblock.com/>

EveryBlock filters an assortment of local news by location so you can keep track of what's happening on your block, in your neighborhood and all over your city. For a long time, that's been a tough question to answer. In dense, bustling cities like Chicago, New York and San Francisco, the number of daily media reports, government proceedings and local Internet conversations is staggering. Every day, a wealth of local information is created — officials inspect restaurants, journalists cover fires and Web users post photographs — but who has time to sort through all of that? Their mission at EveryBlock is to solve that problem. They aim to collect all of the news and civic goings-on that have happened recently in your city, and make it simple for you to keep track of news in particular areas. They are a geographic filter — a “news feed” for your neighborhood, or, yes, even your block.

Federal Business Opportunities

<https://www.fbo.gov/>

Federal Business Opportunities is the United States Government's one-stop virtual marketplace. Through this single point-of-entry, commercial vendors and government buyers are invited to post, search, monitor, and retrieve opportunities solicited by the entire Federal contracting community.

Federal IT Dashboard

<http://it.usaspending.gov/>

The IT Dashboard provides the public with an online window into the details of Federal information technology investments and provides users with the ability to track the progress of investments over time. The IT Dashboard displays data received from agency reports to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB), including general information on over 7,000 Federal IT investments and detailed data for nearly 800 of those investments that agencies classify as "major." The performance data used to track the 800 major IT investments is based on milestone information displayed in agency reports to OMB called "Exhibit 300s." Agency CIOs are responsible for evaluating and updating select data on a monthly basis, which is accomplished through interfaces provided on the website.

FedSpending.org - A Project of OMB Watch

<http://www.fedspending.org/>

The purpose of the FedSpending.org database is to give journalists, analysts, government officials, and regular citizens easy access to information on federal spending. Broader access to this information should foster the development of a better informed, active citizenry that has more power to hold elected officials accountable. FedSpending.org is limited to information contained within the FPDS and FAADS government databases (See here for data that is not included on FedSpending.org).

FedThread - Interacting With the Federal Register

<http://www.fedthread.org/>

FedThread is a new way of interacting with the Federal Register. FedThread gives you: a) collaborative annotation: Attach a note to any paragraph of the Federal Register; start a conversation; b) advanced search: Search the Federal Register (back to 2000) on full text, by date, agency, or other fields; and c) customized feeds: Turn any search into an RSS or email feed; FedThread notifies you when new items match your search query. The Federal Register tells you what your government is doing, in a lot more detail than you get from the news media. FedThread is possible because of the government's new XML-format Federal Register, a milestone in technology-based civic engagement that lets citizens create new services that in turn provide value back to government.

<http://maplight.org/>

MAPLight.org, a groundbreaking public database, with offices located in Berkeley, California, illuminates the connection between campaign donations and legislative votes in unprecedented ways. Elected United States officials collect large sums of money to run their campaigns, and they often pay back campaign contributors with special access and favorable laws. This common practice is contrary to the public interest, yet legal. MAPLight.org makes money/vote connections transparent, to help citizens hold their legislators accountable. MAPLight.org combines three data sets: a) Bill texts and legislative voting records; b) Supporting and opposing interests for each bill; and c) Campaign contribution data from the Center for Responsive Politics and the National Institute on Money in State Politics. Combining this data makes visible key information that could never before be determined easily.

Metagovernment Project

The mission of the Metagovernment project is to support the development and use of Internet tools which enable the members of any community to fully participate in the governance of that community. They are a global group of people working on various projects which further this goal. They expect governance software to be adopted first in small communities, and then to spread outward with the potential to gradually replace many institutions of representative democracy with a new kind of social organization called collaborative governance. They conceive a world where every person, without exception, is able to substantively participate in any governance structure in which they have an interest. They envision governance which is not only more open, free, and democratic; but also which is more effective and less fallible than pre-Internet forms of governance.

National Bureau of Economic Research (NBER)

<http://www.nber.org/>

Founded in 1920, the National Bureau of Economic Research is a private, nonprofit, nonpartisan research organization dedicated to promoting a greater understanding of how the economy works. The NBER is committed to undertaking and disseminating unbiased economic research among public policymakers, business professionals, and the academic community. Over the years the Bureau's research agenda has encompassed a wide variety of issues that confront our society. The Bureau's early research focused on the aggregate economy, examining in detail the business cycle and long-term economic growth. Simon Kuznets' pioneering work on national income accounting, Wesley Mitchell's influential study of the business cycle, and Milton Friedman's research on the demand for money and the determinants of consumer spending were among the early studies done at the NBER. The NBER is the nation's leading nonprofit economic research organization. Sixteen of the 31 American Nobel Prize winners in Economics and six of the past Chairmen of the President's Council of Economic Advisers have been researchers at the NBER. The more than 1,000 professors of economics and business now teaching at universities around the country who are NBER researchers are the leading scholars in their fields. These Bureau associates concentrate on four types of empirical research: developing new statistical measurements, estimating quantitative models of economic behavior, assessing the effects of public policies on the U.S. economy, and projecting the effects of alternative policy proposals.

the management of information technology in the federal government. From time to time, Nextgov and Government Executive.com will share content and collaborate on features and events. Nextgov.com provides news, interaction and research for government and contractor executives and managers in the information technology community. Their readers are high-ranking civilian and military officials who are responsible for providing IT support to those who defend the nation and carry out the many laws that define the government's role in our economy and society. Nextgov.com's essential editorial mission is to cover the IT and business processes that the federal government deploys to meet agency missions – dozens of which dwarf the largest institutions in the private sector. They aspire to serve the people who manage these huge agencies and programs in much the way that large consumer and business-to-business technology magazines serve private-sector managers.

NYC Stimulus Tracker

<http://www.nyc.gov/html/ops/nycstim/html/tracker/tracker.shtml>

With the NYCStat Stimulus Tracker, New Yorkers can track the City's use of federal stimulus/recovery funds provided through the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009 (ARRA). This funding includes federal tax cuts, expansion of unemployment benefits and other social welfare provisions, and domestic spending in education, health care, energy efficiency and infrastructure. The stimulus money for New York City will be used to ensure continued vital City services, provide assistance to New Yorkers in need, and stimulate the City's economy.

Office of Management and Budget (OMB)

<http://www.whitehouse.gov/omb/>

OMB's predominant mission is to assist the President in overseeing the preparation of the federal budget and to supervise its administration in Executive Branch agencies. In helping to formulate the President's spending plans, OMB evaluates the effectiveness of agency programs, policies, and procedures, assesses competing funding demands among agencies, and sets funding priorities. OMB ensures that agency reports, rules, testimony, and proposed legislation are consistent with the President's Budget and with Administration policies. In addition, OMB oversees and coordinates the Administration's procurement, financial management, information, and regulatory policies. In each of these areas, OMB's role is to help improve administrative management, to develop better performance measures and coordinating mechanisms, and to reduce any unnecessary burdens on the public.

Open311 - Collaborative Model and Open Standard for Civic Issue Tracking

<http://open311.org/>

Currently, the most developed function of Open311 technologies is to report and track non-emergency issues in public spaces. Common issues include potholes, broken streetlights, garbage, vandalism, and other problems that compromise public spaces and infrastructure. Using a mobile device or a computer, someone can enter information (ideally with a photo) about a problem at a given location. This report is then routed to the relevant authority to address the problem. What's different from a traditional 311 report is that this information is available for anyone to see and it allows anyone to contribute more information. By enabling collaboration on these issues, the open model makes it easier to collect and organize more information about important problems. By making the information public, it provides transparency and accountability for those responsible for the problem. Transparency also ensures that everyone's voice is heard and in-turn encourages more participation.

OpenCongress - Track Bills, Votes, Senators, and Representatives in the U.S. Congress

<http://www.opencongress.org/>

OpenCongress brings together official government data with news coverage, blog posts, comments, and more to give you the real story behind what's happening in Congress. Small groups of political insiders and lobbyists already know what's really going on in Congress. They think everyone should be an insider. OpenCongress is a free, open-source, non-profit, and non-partisan web resource with a mission to make Congress more transparent and to encourage civic engagement. OpenCongress is a joint project of the Sunlight Foundation and the Participatory Politics Foundation.

Open CRS Network - Congressional Research Reports for the People

<http://opencrs.com/>

American taxpayers spend over $100 million a year to fund the Congressional Research Service, a "think tank" that provides reports to members of Congress on a variety of topics relevant to current political events. Yet, these reports are not made available to the public in a way that they can be easily obtained. A project of the Center for Democracy & Technology through the cooperation of several organizations and collectors of CRS Reports, Open CRS provides citizens access to CRS Reports already in the public domain and encourages Congress to provide public access to all CRS Reports.

Open Government Guide

OpenPlans - Open Government and Livable Streets

<http://openplans.org/>

At OpenPlans, they think cities can work better. They think it should be easier for public agencies in one place to adopt good ideas and good software from other places. They think opening up data and inviting citizens into the civic process is a good thing. And they are helping make it happen. OpenPlans is a non-profit technology organization focused on open government and livable streets. They build open source software. They help agencies open up their data. They report on urban issues.

Performance.Gov - Driving Federal Performance

<http://performance.gov/>

Responding to the President's challenge to cut waste, save money, and better serve the American people, Performance.gov provides a window on the Obama Administration's approach to improving performance and accountability. Performance.gov shows progress on the Administration's efforts to create a government that is more effective, efficient, innovative, and responsive. Reforming how Washington works is an ongoing effort that demands vigilance and leadership.

Publications.USA.gov - United States Publications

<http://publications.usa.gov/>

For more than 40 years, the Federal Citizen Information Center (FCIC) has been a trusted one-stop source for answers to questions about consumer problems and government services. FCIC, part of the General Services Administration's Office of Citizen Services and Innovative Technologies, has traditionally provided publications to consumers via the publications distribution center in Pueblo, Colorado. The Pueblo.GSA.gov website was where consumers could go to find information and order publications on a variety of topics from the federal government. Publications.USA.gov replaces the former Pueblo.GSA.gov. The new site provides better navigation; search; shopping experience; and now some of your favorite publications in popular e-reader formats. Additionally, they will use social media channels to keep you informed of new publications.

Recovery.org - Economic Recovery Package Information

<http://www.Recovery.org/>

This site is currently in BETA but will soon provide real-time data, maps, and graphs detailing the spending activity associated with the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act. Onvia tracks "every dime" of spending by Federal, State and Local government agencies, and Recovery.com will allow you to explore these activities in great detail by State, by Congressional District, and by Community. Whether you are a business looking to secure projects funded by stimulus dollars or a taxpayer who wants to know how your government is spending your money in your community, Onvia will present you with the most comprehensive, real-time view of this information.

Recovery.gov - Monitoring New World Government Spending

<http://www.Recovery.gov/>

Monitor the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act to see how and where your tax dollars are spent. Recovery.gov is a website that lets you, the taxpayer, figure out where the money from the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act is going. There are going to be a few different ways to search for information. The money is being distributed by Federal agencies, and soon you'll be able to see where it's going -- to which states, to which congressional districts, even to which Federal contractors. As soon as they are able to, they will display that information visually in maps, charts, and graphics. An oversight board will routinely update this site as part of an unprecedented effort to root out waste, inefficiency, and unnecessary spending in our government.

Regulations.gov - Search

<http://www.regulations.gov/>

Regulations.gov is your source for all regulations (or rulemakings) issued by U.S. government agencies. On this site, you can find: a) All Federal regulations that are open for public comment (i.e., proposed rules) and closed for comment (i.e., final rules) as published in the Federal Register; b) Many Federal agency notices published in the Federal Register; and c) Additional supporting materials, public comments, and Federal agency guidance and adjudications. When you find a document, you can also submit comments through the web site on those documents that are open for public comment. After Congressional bills become laws, Federal Departments and Agencies are responsible for enforcing those laws through regulations. Departments and Agencies develop regulations through the Federal rulemaking process, most commonly through a notice-and-comment process. In general, Departments and Agencies publish proposed rules that are open for public comment, and after a specified timeframe, the Department or Agency publishes a final rule based on public comments and other information.

Regulations.gov users can find Federal proposed and final rules published every business day by the National Archives and Records Administration (NARA) in the U.S. government's Federal Register, and submit comments through the web site to the Agencies on proposed rules that are open for public comment. The Regulations.gov web site also houses other types of federal information. In addition to Federal regulations, many Departments and Agencies use Regulations.gov to post other types of documents open for public comment, such as Agency significant guidance. Certain Federal agencies also allow the public to initiate an action by filing a submission via Regulations.gov.

<http://isd.ischool.berkeley.edu/stimulus/feeds/feeds.html>

Stimulus Feeds is prepared and hosted by the Information and Service Design Program (ISD) of UC Berkeley's School of Information. This is the complete list of feeds currently provided by Agency Recovery Sites themselves. This table groups these feeds by agency, and then by feed type. In addition to these agency-maintained feeds, the Stimulus Feeds site provides feeds for all weekly reports published on recovery.gov (republishing the Excel data as XML and XHTML); these feeds are available in the Scraped Data column. Each of the agency feeds can be tested for validity (i.e., whether it is a correct feed) by simply pressing the validate link following the feed URI.

Stimulus Watch - Keeping an Eye On the Economic Recovery Spending

<http://www.StimulusWatch.org/>

StimulusWatch.org was built to help the new administration keep its pledge to invest stimulus money smartly, and to hold public officials to account for the taxpayer money they spend. We do this by allowing you, citizens around the country with local knowledge about the proposed "shovel-ready" projects in your city, to find, discuss and rate those projects. These projects are not part of the stimulus bill. They are candidates for funding by federal grant programs once the bill passes.

SubsidyScope

<http://subsidyscope.com/>

Subsidyscope aims to raise public awareness about the role of federal subsidies in the economy. This new project, launched by The Pew Charitable Trusts, plans to create a searchable database of federal subsidies and publish the data online. Over the next few years, the project will build this subsidy database industry sector by industry sector.

This We Know: Explore U.S. Government Data About Your Community

<http://www.thisweknow.org/>

Their mission is to present the information the U.S. government collects about every community. By publishing this data in an easy to understand and consistent manner, they seek to empower citizens to act on what's known. In this first phase of development, they focused on a handful of nationwide data sets from six different agencies in the data.gov catalog. They picked data sets that each had a spatial component. All the data sets were converted to RDF and loaded into a RDF database that serves as the foundation for this website. Their long-term vision for ThisWeKnow is to model the entire data.gov catalog and make it available to the public using Semantic Web standards as a large-scale online database. ThisWeKnow will provide citizens with a single destination where they can search and browse all the information the government collects.

THOMAS (Library of Congress)

<http://thomas.loc.gov/>

THOMAS was launched in January of 1995, at the inception of the 104th Congress. ## XML Federal Register - Bulk Data and Daily Files

<http://www.gpo.gov/fdsys/bulkdata/FR>

The White House, U.S. Government Printing Office (GPO) and the National Archives’ Office of the Federal Register (OFR) achieved a breakthrough in making Government information available and usable by the public. GPO converted the text of the Federal Register (2000-2009) into XML (extensible markup language) and placed it online in numerous Federal Government portals, which include: GPO’s Federal Digital System (www.fdsys.gov), The Federal Register Web site (www.federalregister.gov) and the Government’s new portal for Government data (www.data.gov). For direct access to Federal Register bulk data files, go to: www.gpo.gov/fdsys/bulkdata/FR. This project began when President Barack Obama challenged Federal agencies to create a more open and transparent Government. The change supplements the official publishing formats with XML, a form of text that can be manipulated in virtually limitless ways with digital applications. For example, people who want to know about the workings of the Executive branch of the Federal Government no longer need to sift through the Federal Register in its traditional Department-by-Department and Agency-by-Agency format. In this new format users can rearrange the Federal Register’s contents in personalized ways to match their particular interests. It is now possible, for example, to download the Federal Register and easily see what proposed actions might affect one’s community or region, or what actions might have an impact on one’s profession or business interests.

MindMaps - HTML5 Based Application for Mind Mapping

<http://drichard.org/mindmaps/>

This is a prototype of an HTML5 based mind mapping application. It lets you create neat looking mind maps in the browser. Be aware that it is under development and does still lack some essential features. But did you know that it is available offline? You can use the app wherever you are, there is no need for an internet connection, everything happens inside your browser on your machine. There are many mind mapping applications out there. However, the desktop apps are often bloated and not intuitive, and most web apps charge you for premium features. This one is free, open source and it's full of HTML5 goodness. You spend most of your time inside your browser anyway. Why not create your mind maps there as well? This app tries its best to deliver you a smooth user experience that you know from desktop software products. You need a decent web browser that implements all HTML5 functionality and offers support for CSS3. Chrome 10+, Firefox 3.6+, Safari 5+, Opera 10.6+, IE9+ should do the job. This has been added to the tools section of Research Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog.

Digital Public Library of America

<http://dp.la/>

The DPLA planning initiative grew out of an October 2010 meeting at the Radcliffe Institute for Advanced Study, which brought together over 40 representatives from foundations, research institutions, cultural organizations, government, and libraries to discuss best approaches to building a national digital library. In December 2010, the Berkman Center for Internet & Society, generously supported by the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation, convened leading experts in libraries, technology, law, and education to begin work on this problem; a two-year process of intense grassroots community organization, beginning in October 2011 and hosted at the Berkman Center, will result in a realistic and detailed workplan for launching the DPLA, as well as unveiling of a prototype of the system with specially digitized materials. The vision of a national digital library has been circulating among librarians, scholars, educators, and private industry representatives since the early 1990s, but it has not yet materialized. Efforts led by a range of organizations, including the Library of Congress, HathiTrust, and the Internet Archive, have successfully built resources that provide books, images, historical records, and audiovisual materials to anyone with Internet access. Many universities, public libraries, and other public-spirited organizations have digitized materials that could be brought together under the frame of the DPLA, but these digital collections often exist in silos. Compounding this problem are disparate technical standards, disorganized and incomplete metadata, and a host of legal issues. No project has yet succeeded in bringing these different viewpoints, experiences, and collections together with leading technical experts and the best of private industry to find solutions to these complex challenges. Users have neither coherent access to these materials nor tools to use them in new and exciting ways, and institutions have no clear blueprint for creating a shared infrastructure to serve the public good. The time is right to launch an ambitious project to realize the great promise of the Internet for the advancement of sharing information and of using technology to enable new knowledge and discoveries in the United States. Sharing files through file hosters requires you to first upload the file and contact the receiver which in turn will then download it. This 2 step process can considerably extend the total file transfer time. Additionally to throttling download speed file hosters impose several restrictions like limited file size and download quantity. At Click2Copy you can send as many arbitrarily sized files as you want. Also, by storing the file on a unknown server there is a risk of someone getting access to the file, which is a serious issue if the file contains confidential or private data. In contrast to such services at Click2Copy you do not need to upload the files to a server, which considerably reduces the risk of running into privacy issues. ## Asana - Free Collaborative Task and Project Management Software

<https://asana.com/>

Asana is an effort to re-imagine how we work together, through modern productivity software. Fast and versatile, Asana helps individuals and groups get more done. It will be free of charge, delivered over the Web, and initially suitable for both individuals and up to 50 person teams/companies. Keeping groups of people organized is a problem at the heart of every organization. That's why they have focused on delivering a real solution with features like full text search, news feeds, per-task walls (comments + feed), infinite undo, version control, advanced sharing and privacy models, a bidirectional email bridge, LDAP integration, offline support, recurring tasks, "remind me later," task dependencies, mobile, workflows, and visualizations (e.g. an editable Gantt chart view). Unlike heavy-duty enterprise suites they have tried, they are focused on making these features fast, easy, and even enjoyable to use. They are currently in private beta but to be released to the public very soon. This has been added to the tools section of Research Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog.

Overview - Visualization to Connect the Dots - Open Source Tool

<http://overview.ap.org/>

Overview is an open-source tool to help journalists find stories in large amounts of data, by cleaning, visualizing and interactively exploring large document and data sets. Whether from government transparency initiatives, leaks or Freedom of Information requests, journalists are drowning in more documents than they can ever hope to read. There are good tools for searching within large document sets for names and keywords, but that doesn't help find stories we're not looking for. Overview will display relationships among topics, people, places and dates to help journalists to answer the question, "What's in there?" They are building an interactive system where computers do the visualization, while a human guides the exploration. They will also produce

Shortmarks - The Fastest Way To Navigate the Web

<http://shortmarks.com/>

Shortmarks takes keyword searches and custom search engines to a new level, allowing you to use them with virtually any web browser and operating system, without having to sync or install extensions. Changes are available as soon as you hit save. Shortmarks is ideal for keyboard shortcut fanatics, letting you browse the web without leaving the keyboard. It's also great for anyone who wants to browse the web with lightning speed. Try the demo account or watch the screencast below to learn more. Creating a Shortmarks account is fast - just like Shortmarks (it takes about 5 seconds). Login to your Google account and Shortmarks will ask for permission to view your email address to identify your user in the database. No other information is accessed (not even your name). Your email address will only be used to contact you about Shortmarks. With an account you can customize your keywords and bookmarks with your preferred sites. Once you see how much faster you can browse the web, you'll never want to go back. This has been added to the tools section of Research Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog.

Forum for Social Economics (FSE)

<http://www.tandf.co.uk/journals/xfse>

The Forum for Social Economics (FSE) is an international academic journal and is a publication of the Association for Social Economics (ASE). Founded in 1971, the primary focus of the Forum is on applying social-economic analysis to policy relevant issues and/or on the implications of alternative policy perspectives encompassing the social economy. The Forum is a pluralistic journal publishing work that addresses economic issues within wider theoretical, methodological, and ethical, as well as institutional, cultural or natural environmental contexts. It contributes to cutting-edge discussions on the perspectives, theory, and methods of modern realistic and complexity economics, that is, social economics in a broad sense. The Forum, therefore, also is sympathetic to papers that transcend established disciplinary boundaries. Papers should make a contribution to past or current socioeconomic issues that have contemporary relevance to economists, social scientists, policy makers and public administration, employees and their representatives, NGOs, and business representatives. The journal welcomes stimulating original articles that are clearly written, draw upon real-world problems and relate to contemporary policy issues if possible. Also non-technical articles of topical, historical and ethical interest that will appeal to a wide range of readers are welcome. The journal is also interested in serving as an avenue for issues regarding teaching economics, in particular teaching approaches to social and heterodox economics, as well as fostering pluralism in modern economics. The Forum invites original regular academic papers as well as short papers, notes, discussions, reviews and literature surveys. The Forum also invites young scholars and graduate students to submit their research papers.

Updated> Prediction Markets White Paper Link Compilation

<http://www.PredictionMarkets.com/>

I have just updated the associated white paper link compilation of the Prediction Markets Subject Tracer™ Information Blog by Marcus P. Zillman, M.S., A.M.H.A. It is a 20 page .pdf document 201KB.

Documentary.net - View Free and Legal Documentaries

<http://documentary.net/>

Documentary.net is the best place for watching free and legal documentaries. They guide you to the vast amount of films on the web and curate the top documentary films for you. And their experts write reports, guides and reviews. Feel free to share good docs with them or share your thoughts by commenting the films. Their films are available worldwide, on any platform. This has been added to Research Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog. This has been added to Reference Resources Subject Tracer™

GROU.PS - Social Groupware Platform

<http://www.grou.ps/>

GROU.PS is a social groupware platform that allows people to come together and form interactive communities around a shared interest or affiliation. The functionality of any online group is limited only by the members' collective imagination and ambition. The GROU.PS platform is used to create a wide variety of community sites, including online gaming forums, e-learning classrooms, fan clubs, charity fundraising campaigns, college alumni societies, and event planning portals. In short, any organization seeking to aggregate and organize people online can greatly improve its effectiveness, engagement and appeal by migrating to the GROU.PS platform. By giving any user the ability to create an easy-to-use, yet powerful, social network, GROU.PS is propelling online collaboration, communication and content sharing in a new socially aware direction. This has been added to the tools section of Research Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog.

Journal of Business and Economic Statistics (JBES)

<http://www.tandf.co.uk/journals/UBES>

The Journal of Business and Economic Statistics (JBES) publishes a range of articles, primarily applied statistical analyses of microeconomic, macroeconomic, forecasting, business, and finance related topics. More general papers in statistics, econometrics, computation, simulation, or graphics are also appropriate if they are immediately applicable to the journal's general topics of interest. Articles published in JBES contain significant results, high-quality methodological content, excellent exposition, and usually include a substantive empirical application.

Viewbix - Empower Your Video

<http://www.viewbix.com/>

Viewbix empowers companies to leverage their videos by inserting interactive apps and sharing that experience across the web, mobile and social networks. Companies are looking for ways to maximize their reach across the web, mobile and social networks. Yesterday they shared a video hoping to drive traffic. Today, they share a fully interactive Viewbix that allows their customers to engage and transact while watching their videos. In a matter of minutes, companies can easily add apps to existing videos, engage viewers and drive calls to action. Once a Viewbix is created, that rich interactive experience can then be shared across the web, mobile and social platforms. This will be added to eCommerce Resources Subject Tracer™. This will be added to Entrepreneurial Resources Subject Tracer™.

AceProject - Unique Collaboration-oriented Project Management System

<http://www.aceproject.com/>

There are hundreds of project management software solutions on the market. Some are free and very limited, some focus on project collaboration a lot, some focus on advanced project management a lot, some break the bank, and some require learning a PM methodology. AceProject is unique. We know that everyone has projects to manage (or an entire project portfolio), but not everyone has professional project management expertise or use the right tool or project management application. They want to help you become an efficient project manager, and if you are already, they want you to become the best project manager you can be. How? By providing a collaboration-oriented project management system, with a free package available, and an impressive feature range for project and time tracking, timesheet management and project cost tracking. AceProject can also be used as an issue management program, bug tracking software and expense software as well. Our project management software can be used online (SaaS) or deployed on your intranet. The software-as-a-service option (Hosted packages) is the most popular as it is hassle-free. No maintenance, no updates, no software installation

Technometrics

<http://www.tandf.co.uk/journals/UTCH>

Since its inception in 1959, the mission of Technometrics has been to contribute to the development and use of statistical methods in the physical, chemical, and engineering sciences. Technometrics publishes papers that describe new statistical techniques, illustrate innovative application of known statistical methods, or review methods, issues, or philosophy in a particular area of statistics or science, when such papers are consistent with the journal's objective. Since 1959, the methods presented in the journal have reflected changes in the discipline. In recent years, some of these changes have been associated with improved computer technology and availability, resulting in highly flexible and computer-intensive approaches to scientific data analysis. (See for example the lead article in the August 1998 issue by Richard A. Becker, Linda A. Clark, and Diane Lambert entitled "Events Defined By Duration and Severity, with an Application to Network Reliability," with discussion by Jeff Robinson and Josef Schmee.) With the emergence of massive computing and data storage capabilities, statistical approaches to screening, flexible modeling, pattern characterization, and change detection that were infeasible 20 years ago are now viable. There have also been shifts in basic attitudes about data analysis (e.g., less formal hypothesis testing, more fitted models via graphical analysis), and in how some of our important application areas are managed (e.g., quality assurance through robust design rather than detailed inspection). Many of the problems in industry today concern the analysis of huge data sets that lead to improved quality or better understanding of the manufacturing or development process. The journal would like to encourage submissions that address problems of this nature and that take advantage of modern resources.

Updated> Finding Experts By Using the Internet

<http://www.FindingExperts.info/>

I have just updated my white paper link compilation on Finding Experts By Using the Internet. This is a 28 page .pdf file (264KB) and freely available from the above URL. Finding Experts By Using the Internet is dedicated to giving you the internet sources to discover that needed expert(s) that you have been looking for. The Internet is a vast global resource of knowledge created by experts and the ability to find and contact these experts is extremely important for both academic activities as well as business and special interest needs. [Updated November 1, 2011 28 pages 264KB .pdf]. Additional white papers available by clicking here.

Open Access Success Stories

<http://www.oastories.org/>

From researchers whose work has made waves across the world, to repositories that have given a nation's research a foothold in the international scientific community, all the stories on this site bear testament to the power of open access. They range across Europe, across disciplines and across stakeholders but all share a common core value – that access to freely available research online can change lives and, perhaps, change the world. Explore the stories using the menus above and to the side – dip into any of the stories by clicking on 'success stories' at the top of the page or choose a category from the menu on the right to look at specific countries, types of story or benefits. This site will be updated with new stories until at least the end of 2011 so keep checking back. This has been added to Research Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog.

Resource Nation - Profit Through Knowledge

<http://www.resourcenation.com/>

Resource Nation helps business purchasers save time and money as vendors compete for your business. They have interactive tools, buyer guides, and the comprehensive resources you need to find the best vendors at the best prices. Since inception in 2007, our company has grown every quarter to become one of the largest marketplaces for business buyers and sellers to connect online. Over the last three years, they have connected millions of business purchasers with the vendors, resources, and advice necessary to make intelligent purchases. Their vendor network includes thousands of companies, ranging from local proprietors to Fortune 500 companies such as Cisco, Sage Payment Solutions, FoodTronix and Paychex. You can find their service on some of the largest business destination sites on the Internet such as Entrepreneur.com, Inc.com, Allbusiness.com, and others. CEO Ryan Peddycord is a 40 Under 40 award winner and our Chairman, Kenneth B. Hamlet, is the former CEO and President of Holiday Inns Inc. and later the Chairman of Vistage International. They are headquartered in San Diego, CA with an office in Boston, MA. This has been added to Business Intelligence Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog. I am very pleased to announce that I have just updated my Grid, Distributed and Cloud Computing Resources Primer. This primer is 31 pages and a .pdf document (252KB) and freely available from the above URL. The primer gives an excellent overview of Cloud Computing along with a comprehensive listing of cloud, grid and distributed computing resources! It will be permanently archived in my White Papers site.

Searcheeze - Search Collaboration of Content Curation

<http://www.searcheeze.com/>

Searcheeze is the evolution of another well known service called Ibrii: “Snip and share everything you see from webpages”. After 2 years of continuous feedback from users, Ibrii evolved in Searcheeze. This is the best way to collect, curate and publish content about your favorite topics, even in group. Three simple steps: a) Collect web content: Collect text, images, video and audio streams from the web; Stop fighting with cut&paste from web pages into text docs; and Mix content from different pages; b) Organize and curate: Organize the content as you like; Contextualize adding value; Curate also in group to minimize the effort; and c) Publish your Magazine; Publish a magazine for each topic you like to curate; Share your work on blogs and social accounts; Get followed and become an influencer. This has been added to the tools section of Research Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog.

ScraperWiki - Community of Programmers Sifting Information To Give You the Edge

<https://scraperwiki.com/>

There's lots of useful data on the internet – crime statistics, government spending, missing kittens... But getting at it isn't always easy. There's a table here, a report there, a few web pages, PDFs, spreadsheets... And it can be scattered over thousands of different places on the web, making it hard to see the whole picture and the story behind it. It's like trying to build something from Lego when someone has hidden the bricks all over town and you have to find them before you can start building! To get at data, programmers write bits of code called 'screen scrapers', which extract the useful bits so they can be reused in other apps, or rummaged through by journalists and researchers. But these bits of code tend to break, get thrown away or forgotten once they have been used, and so the data is lost again. Which is bad. ScraperWiki is an online tool to make that process simpler and more collaborative. Anyone can write a screen scraper using the online editor. In the free version, the code and data are shared with the world. Because it's a wiki, other programmers can contribute to and improve the code. If you're not a programmer, or if you want to tackle a large or complex task, you can ask the ScraperWiki team to organise it for you. This has been added to the tools section of Research Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog. This will be added to Web Data Extractors White Paper.

BuzzData - Data Sharing and Collaboration Made Easy

<http://buzzdata.com/>

BuzzData is the best place to share and collaborate on private and public datasets. People who work with data agree that email and basic file sharing platforms simply don't cut it. They need something that gives them a permanent place to work with the data and develop the story it tells. Share data with your team and collaborate privately and securely. Publish data openly and see what the world does with it. Find data and join communities around the topics you're interested in. Features include: a) See the bigger picture: Give your data a dedicated home page (URL) and attach visualizations, articles and other documents to tell the story in your data; b) Track changes: BuzzData gives you excellent version control so you can see how the data story evolves but also revert at any time; c) Easy publishing: "Drag and drop" to publish on our secure platform and select from our wide range of licenses to control how your data is used, and d) Invite collaborators: Good things happen when data is shared. Watch your collaborators add new chapters to the story in your data. This has been added to the tools section of Research Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog. This will be added to Entrepreneurial Resources Subject Tracer™.

Google Visualization API and Chart Tools

<http://code.google.com/apis/chart/interactive/docs/index.html>

The Google Visualization API allows you to create charts and reporting applications over structured data and helps integrate these directly into your website or on a Gadget. With the Google Visualization API, you can access structured data--created locally in your browser or retrieved from supported data sources in a simple tabular format. You can also implement your own data source as Visualization API data source and enable any Visualization-compliant visualization and/or application to access your data. The format is amenable to use by reporting, analysis or chart applications. You can thus visualize the data and/or add new functionality to applications, such as Google Spreadsheets. This has been added to the tools section of Research Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog.

Data Curation Profile Toolkit

<http://www4.lib.purdue.edu/dcp/>

This website is an environment where academic librarians of all kinds, special librarians at research facilities, archivists involved in the preservation of digital data, and those who support digital repositories can find help, support and camaraderie in exploring avenues to learn more about working with research data and the use of the Data Curation Profiles Tool. A Data Curation Profile is essentially an outline of the “story” of a data set or collection, describing its origin and lifecycle within a research project. The Profile and its associated Toolkit grew out of an inquiry into the changing environment of scholarly communication, especially the possibility of researchers providing access to data much further upstream than previously imagined. Data Curation Profiles can: a) provide a guide for discussing data with researchers; b) give insight into areas of attention in data management; c) help assess information needs related to data collections; d) give insight into differences between data in various disciplines; e) help identify possible data services; and f) create a starting point for curating a data set for archiving and preservation. This has been added to the tools section of Research Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog.

2012 – 2014 Internet Society Business Plan

<http://isoc.org/wp/newsletter/?p=4766>

The 2012 – 2014 Internet Society Business Plan is now available on our website. Beyond the progress and accomplishments from last year, the plan builds on a wide range of inputs from the Internet Society leadership and community. It highlights a business-planning framework built around Key Success Factors, Strategic Objectives, and measurable Impacts. The plan was approved at the most recent meeting of the Board of Trustee’s in October and highlights the following strategic objectives that the Internet Society will organize its business around:

- A. Fostering an open, innovative, and trusted Internet worldwide
- B. Advancing policies and strategies that strengthen the Internet’s growth and evolution

Dabble - Learning Something New

<http://dabble.co/>

Dabble started with a simple insight: It's difficult to keep learning, trying and doing. Although we might consider ourselves curious, adventurous sorts, we find lots of excuses that prevent us from committing to a class (I want to brush up on my Spanish, but it's too expensive), cultivating hobbies (I want to brew beer ... where do I start?) or finding a substitute for our typical night-out routines (drinks or dinner ... again). That's where Dabble comes in. They make it easy to try something new or share your passion through one-time affordable classes. Explore the city around you, meet cool people and expand your horizons – because doing something today is so much better than putting life on the back burner. They believe learning, trying & doing including: a) Doesn't need to happen in a classroom. Whether it's in a park, a coffee shop, a bar or a restaurant down the street, learning can happen anywhere and it damn well should; b) Isn't reserved for the "serious." Even if you have no experience in the subject, learning should be fun, accessible & non-intimidating for all involved; c) Can be taught by anyone. You don't need a certificate to be a teacher, you just need knowledge & passion in a subject you'd like to share with the world; d) Is best experienced with other people. Sure, you could pick up a book or watch a video online, but learning is more fun beside cool, like-minded folks; and e) Is part of a breakfast (of champions). Learning is good for the creative soul. Shaking things up & challenging yourself should be a regular part of a happy, healthy diet. This will be added to Tutorial Resources Subject Tracer™.

FeedsAPI - Extract Content from Web Pages Tool

<http://www.feedsapi.com/>

FeedsAPI is a free service to help people extract content from web pages. It can extract content from a standard HTML page and return a 1-item feed or it can transform an existing feed into a full-text feed. It's very simple, just enter a shortened rss feed and it spits out solely based on this information a full-text rss feed. Create Full content rss feeds and use our service for content extraction and information retrieval. FeedsAPI is a web

They think relatively simple tools can help to improve the quality of information on the Internet, and by extension in the greater world around us. Hypothes.is will be a distributed, open-source platform for the collaborative evaluation of information. It will enable sentence-level critique of written words combined with a sophisticated yet easy-to-use model of community peer-review. It will work as an overlay on top of any stable content, including news, blogs, scientific articles, books, terms of service, ballot initiatives, legislation and regulations, software code and more-without requiring participation of the underlying site. It is based on a new draft standard for annotating digital documents currently being developed by the Open Annotation Collaboration, a consortium that includes the Internet Archive, NISO (National Information Standards Organization), O'Reilly Books, Amazon, Barnes and Noble, and a number of academic institutions. ### Beautiful Soup - HTML/XML Parser for Quick Turnaround Screen Scraping and Web Data Extraction

<http://www.crummy.com/software/BeautifulSoup/>

Beautiful Soup is a Python HTML/XML parser designed for quick turnaround projects like screen-scraping. Three features make it powerful: a) Beautiful Soup won't choke if you give it bad markup. It yields a parse tree that makes approximately as much sense as your original document. This is usually good enough to collect the data you need and run away; b) Beautiful Soup provides a few simple methods and Pythonic idioms for navigating, searching, and modifying a parse tree: a toolkit for dissecting a document and extracting what you need. You don't have to create a custom parser for each application; and c) BeautifulSoup automatically converts incoming documents to Unicode and outgoing documents to UTF-8. You don't have to think about encodings, unless the document doesn't specify an encoding and BeautifulSoup can't autodetect one. Then you just have to specify the original encoding. BeautifulSoup parses anything you give it, and does the tree traversal stuff for you. You can tell it "Find all the links", or "Find all the links of class externalLink", or "Find all the links whose urls match "foo.com", or "Find the table heading that's got bold text, then give me that text." Valuable data that was once locked up in poorly-designed websites is now within your reach. Projects that would have taken hours take only minutes with BeautifulSoup. ### Twijector - Webcasting Tweets for Various Events and Activities

<http://twijector.com/>

Twijector is a free online service for webcasting tweets regarding various events. In fact, it has two main points for users:

Monitoring of opinions about the event: Everyone who becomes a Twitterian can use event hash tag in their tweets (for example: #googlefest2011), to express their thoughts, tips or comments regarding the ongoing event. This allows to receive new topics for a discussion, as well as to determine the right way to provide information for audience. Also, the service can be used to figure out the mass opinion about the seminar, which could be useful for organizers.

Communication without limitations: When shooting events broadcast online, Twittjector allows any Twitterian to ask organizers a question or, alternatively, it allows to answer questions from the audience. This makes possible easy participation of different experts who unable to get to the event, and also very significantly, by many times, increases events' recognition on the Internet (the famous "twitter effect").

Of course, the question already had to be asked: What about spam/malware, etc? These problems can be solved quite easily: by ordering the "Moderation" service for every event, and setting filtering conditions. In other words, on screen sharing will show only those tweets that match your settings – the language, links, emoticons, obscene language control, censorship precautions, etc. This has been added to the tools section of Research Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog. This will be added to Entrepreneurial Resources Subject Tracer™.

iMedisearch - Search Engine for Reliable Medical Information

<http://www.imedisearch.com/>

iMedisearch was originally developed as an extension of features of a pharmacist's clinical resources website - RPhWorld. It was developed out of needs to search pharmacists' trusted and reliable online resources without having to go through each of the websites one at a time. The author, a clinical pharmacist, personally tested this new search engine in his practice and found that it returns much more relevant results compared with the traditional Google. The search engine seems to know that the user is a pharmacist by returning results a pharmacist would be interested in such as drug information and continuing education. This engine was shared with colleagues and with other pharmacists on RPhWorld.com. The feedbacks were overwhelmingly positive. These encouraging feedbacks lead to further development of the search module for physicians, then one for patients or the general public, and eventually one for nurses and allied healths. iMedisearch is an independent entity. They are neither funded nor supported by any third party. However, they do collaborate with HON in providing their

Open Annotation Collaboration

<http://openannotation.org/>

Annotating is a pervasive element of scholarly practice for both the humanist and the scientist. Over time annotations have scholarly value in their own right. The importance of annotating as a scholarly practice coupled with the real-world limitations of existing practices and tools supporting annotation of digital content has had a retarding effect on the growth of digital scholarship and the level of digital resource use by scholars. The overarching goals of the Open Annotation Collaboration (OAC) are to facilitate to emergence of a Web and resource-centric interoperable annotation environment that allows leveraging annotations across the boundaries of annotation clients, annotation servers, and content collections, to demonstrate the utility of this environment, and to see widespread adoption of this environment. This has been added to Research Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog.

Global Open Access Portal (GOAP)

<http://www.unesco.org/new/en/communication-and-information/portals-and-platforms/goap/>

The Global Open Access Portal (GOAP), funded by the Governments of Colombia, Denmark, Norway, and the United States Department of State, presents a current snapshot of the status of Open Access (OA) to scientific information around the world. For countries that have been more successful implementing Open Access, the portal highlights critical success factors and aspects of the enabling environment. For countries and regions that are still in the early stages of Open Access development, the portal identifies key players, potential barriers and opportunities. The Global Open Access Portal is designed to provide the necessary information for policy-makers to learn about the global OA environment and to view their country's status, and understand where and why Open Access has been most successful. At a glance, the portal provides an overview of the framework surrounding Open Access in UNESCO Member States by focusing on: a) the critical success factors for effectively implementing Open Access; b) each country's strengths and opportunities for further developments; c) where mandates for institutional deposits and funding organization have been put into place; d) potential partners at the national and regional level; and e) funding, advocacy, and support organizations throughout the world. This has been added to Research Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog.

Duplicate Content Tool

<http://www.duplicatecontent.net/>

This tool takes into account two parameters when comparing URLs: it considers the similarity degree for both textual content and HTML markup. This allows you to check whether two texts are substantially similar and the likeness of the structure of the pages. You get mainly two pieces of information from the analysis: a) Markup similarity - They consider how many HTML tags are found in both documents: this gives a measure of the probability that two layouts will be considered similar or identical to each other; and b) Text similarity - This value gives an estimate of the risk that any textual content might be filtered out by the Duplicate Content filter. ### Digital Object Identifier (DOI®) System

<http://www.doi.org/>

The Digital Object Identifier (DOI®) System is for identifying content objects in the digital environment. DOI® names are assigned to any entity for use on digital networks. They are used to provide current information, including where they (or information about them) can be found on the Internet. Information about a digital object may change over time, including where to find it, but its DOI name will not change. The DOI System provides a framework for persistent identification, managing intellectual content, managing metadata, linking customers with content suppliers, facilitating electronic commerce, and enabling automated management of media. DOI names can be used for any form of management of any data, whether commercial or non-commercial. The DOI System is an ISO International Standard. The system is managed by the International DOI Foundation, an open membership consortium including both commercial and non-commercial partners. Over 50 million DOI names have been assigned by DOI System Registration Agencies in the US, Australasia, and Europe. Using DOI names as identifiers makes managing intellectual property in a networked environment much easier and more convenient, and allows the construction of automated services and transactions. ### ScienceDaily -Your Source for the Latest Research News

<http://www.sciencedaily.com/>

ScienceDaily is one of the Internet's most popular science news web sites. Since starting in 1995, the award-winning site has earned the loyalty of students, researchers, healthcare professionals, government agencies, educators and the general public around the world. Now with more than 3 million monthly visitors, ScienceDaily generates nearly 15 million page views a month and is steadily growing in its global audience. No other web site offers readers the depth and breadth of breaking news about the latest scientific discoveries that ScienceDaily does in such a user-friendly format – all freely accessible with no subscription fees. With over 65,000 research articles, 15,000 images, 2,500 encyclopedia entries, 1,500 book reviews, and hundreds of educational videos, there is something for everyone on ScienceDaily. Updated several times a day with breaking news and feature articles, seven days a week, the site covers discoveries in all fields of the physical, biological, earth and applied sciences. Stories are integrated with photographs and illustrations, links to journals and academic studies, related research and topics, encyclopedia articles, and videos, to provide a wealth of relevant information on almost every science topic imaginable – from astrophysics to zoology. And thanks to a custom search function, readers can do their own research using the site's extensive archive of stories, topics, articles, videos, images and books. ScienceDaily is best known for showcasing the top science news stories from the world's leading universities and research organizations. These stories are selected from among dozens of press releases and other materials submitted to ScienceDaily every day, and then edited to ensure high quality and relevance. Universities have come to rely on ScienceDaily to spread news about their scientists' findings to a wider audience. And through ScienceDaily's email newsletters and RSS newsfeeds (offered freely to both commercial and non-commercial web sites as well as individuals), news about these important discoveries is further amplified. Over the past 14 years, ScienceDaily has been linked to by thousands of schools and universities, professional associations and research organizations, reference sources and other information authorities, newspapers, magazines and other news services, and increasingly bloggers and social networking and bookmarking sites such as Digg, Facebook, MySpace, and Technorati. ScienceDaily enjoys high rankings with popular web search engines such as Google and Yahoo for hundreds of scientifically important keywords, including the word "science" for which the site comes up in typically the top three search results. ### International Journal of Cloud Computing (IJCC)

<http://www.inderscience.com/browse/index.php?journalCODE=ijcc>

Cloud computing refers to computing with a pool of virtualized computer resources and is driven by economics of scale. A cloud can host a variety of different workloads, and allow workloads to be deployed and scaled-out quickly on-demand by rapid provisioning of virtual machines or physical machines. A cloud supports redundant, self-recovering, highly scalable programming models and allows workloads to recover from many unavoidable hardware/software failures. A cloud also monitors resource use in real time to enable rebalancing of allocations when needed. The idea is to move desktop computing to a service-oriented platform using server clusters and huge databases at datacenters. Cloud computing leverages its low cost and simplicity that benefits both users and the providers through providing cost-effective services and pay-per-use pricing model. In cloud computing, everything including software, platform, and infrastructure is as a service. Cloud computing makes data truly mobile and a user can simply access a chosen cloud with any internet-accessible device. Cloud computing overlaps some of the concepts of cluster, distributed, grid, service, ubiquitous, utility and virtual computing; however it has emerged from these computing domains and now has its own meaning. In cloud computing, a user does not care much what is in the cloud or what goes on there apart from being able to receive service from it. Cloud computing is now associated with a higher level abstraction of the cloud. Instead of there being application software, routers and servers, there are now services. The underlying hardware and software of networking is of course still there but there are now higher level service capabilities available to build applications. Hidden behind the services are data and computer resources. There have been many cloud computing platforms built so far including Google Cloud, IBM BlueCloud and Amazon Elastic Cloud. Programming models for cloud computing have been developed including MapReduce by Google and Hadoop by Yahoo group. Using these cloud computing models and toolsets, IT-related capabilities are provided as services, accessible without requiring detailed knowledge of the underlying technology. Of course, many mature technologies are used as components in cloud computing, but there are still many unresolved and open problems due to its unique characteristics which are different from distributed computing, cluster computing, grid computing, utility computing and service computing. IJCC addresses the most innovative developments, research issues and solutions in cloud computing and its related technologies.

Re.vu - Radical Redesign of the Traditional Resume

<http://re.vu/>

Modern technology makes it possible to design a dynamic, interactive, and visual resume that is significantly more effective at representing the whole person than a common resume alone. This is the core concept of re.vu (pronounced "review") - a radical redesign of the traditional resume. Re.vu makes it simple and fast for anyone to create an original and compelling visual resume. The rich combination of widgets, themes, and personalized settings makes each re.vu unique and memorable. It's not just a visual resume, it's a better visual resume available to everyone, free of charge. And yes, there is a place to link to your traditional resume too. This has been added to Employment Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog.

Environmental Sciences Europe (ESEU)

<http://www.enveurope.com/>

Environmental Sciences Europe (ESEU) is an international journal, focusing primarily on Europe, with a broad scope covering all aspects of environmental sciences, including the main topic regulation. ESEU will discuss the entanglement between environmental sciences and regulation because, in recent years, there have been misunderstandings and even disagreement between stakeholders in these two areas. ESEU will help to improve the comprehension of issues between environmental sciences and regulation. ESEU will be an outlet from the German-speaking (DACH) countries to Europe and an inlet from Europe to the DACH countries regarding environmental sciences and regulation. Moreover, ESEU will facilitate the exchange of ideas and interaction between Europe and the DACH countries regarding environmental regulatory issues. Although Europe is at the center of ESEU, the journal will not exclude the rest of the world, because regulatory issues pertaining to environmental sciences can be fully seen only from a global perspective. Environmental Sciences Europe is available free of charge as an Open Access journal on the Internet. Abstracts available online. Articles available in HTML and PDF format.

Weka 3: Data Mining Software in Java

<http://www.cs.waikato.ac.nz/ml/weka/>

Weka is a collection of machine learning algorithms for data mining tasks. The algorithms can either be applied directly to a dataset or called from your own Java code. Weka contains tools for data pre-processing, classification, regression, clustering, association rules, and visualization. It is also well-suited for developing new machine learning schemes. Weka is open source software issued under the GNU General Public License. This will be added to Data Mining Resources Subject Tracer™.

Mimas - Organization of Experts Powering Knowledge

<http://mimas.ac.uk/>

Mimas is an organization of experts. Their role is to support the advancement of knowledge, powering world-class research and teaching. Technology is at the heart of everything we do. As a nationally designated data centre, they host a significant number of the UK's research information assets. But their core expertise is building applications that enable a wide range of users to make the most of this rich resource – from students and researchers working with census data to investigate social inequalities, to scientists using satellite imagery to survey and protect our environment. They have a longstanding relationship with JISC, developing services that support teaching, learning and research – and strong connections with research councils, especially the Economic and Social Research Council (ESRC). They also have partnerships with commercial groups, universities and colleges, government agencies, and national libraries and archives. European Working Group of the Networked Digital Library of Theses and Dissertations (NDLTD). The DART-Europe partners help to provide researchers with a single European Portal for the discovery of Electronic Theses and Dissertations (ETDs), and they participate in advocacy to influence future European e-theses developments. DART-Europe offers partners a European networking forum on ETD issues, and may provide the opportunity to submit collaborative funding applications to achieve DART-Europe's vision for ETDs. DART-Europe is resourced through partner contributions. Partners support the following principles: 1) DART-Europe will encourage the creation, discovery and use of European e-theses, and will maintain a central Portal for e-thesis aggregation and access; 2) European libraries and consortia are invited to contribute metadata to the DART-Europe Portal. Contributors will determine the terms and conditions under which their metadata are contributed; 3) DART-Europe welcomes the contribution by partners of resources to support the management, discovery, usability and preservation of e-theses, and to further the aims and objectives of DART-Europe; 4) Partners will designate one representative to act as a contact for DART-Europe, and will nominate at least one representative to participate in the DART-Europe email lists; 5) DART-Europe welcomes offers from partners to host DART-Europe Project Board meetings, as occasion demands; 6) Partners will help to secure DART-Europe's status as an international network of excellence in information, expertise and resources relating to ETDs; and 7) DART-Europe will be administered by UCL (University College London) and governed by a Board consisting of representatives of partner organisations. The constitution and Terms of Reference of the governing Board will be determined and from time to time reviewed by the Board. ### Bookstep - Get Your Textbooks

<http://bookstep.com/>

In this age of increasing school fees, students don't want to pay hundreds of dollars for a textbook, read a few chapters, take a few notes and then sell it back for a fraction of what they paid. Bookstep lets users access all learning materials on the cloud at little or no cost. Bookstep is revolutionizing textbooks and digital publishing for both instructors and students:

Students can get instant access to the most up-to-date textbook editions and course materials. They can then take, publish or sell their class notes to other Bookstep users.

Instructors can securely publish their course materials at no cost, and make them accessible by allowing paid or free access to students.

How it works: Bookstep's digital content is accessible from any Internet-enabled device, and the cloud platform offers these interrelated digital solutions: 1) The Textbook Cloud enables digital textbooks, lectures, articles and other educational content delivery; 2) The Publishing Cloud provides direct and open-source publishing capabilities to share or sell educational materials; and 3) Bookstep empowers reading by giving users full control over the cost. The format is compatible with different learning styles, and the price and pace is up to you. With Bookstep, users have the power to control their content and their textbook spending. This will be added to Student Research Resources Subject Tracer™.

Bibliogo - Journal Article Alerting, Curation, Access, Collaboration and Sharing Tool

<http://info.bibliogo.com/>

Journal article alerting, curation, access, collaboration and sharing just got way more efficient for the following: a) Individuals - Simplify article alerting and ordering; b) Workgroups – Collaborate securely and share articles legally with colleagues; and 3) Organizations – Take a top-down, permissions-based approach to bibliographic management. Bibliogo is for you if: 1) You use journal articles; 2) You like to be the first to know about the latest research; 3) You create iTunes playlists to share with your friends; 4) You use the 'Share' button on social networking sites; and 5) You know what an RSS news aggregator is. ## ZoomShift - Web-based Scheduling Software for Managing Employee Availability, Creating Schedules, and Swapping Shifts

<http://www.zoomshift.com/>

They have one goal: to make employee scheduling as simple as possible. They know that by doing this they can make a lot of people happy by saving them time, money, and hassle. In order to make this happen they have come to a few realizations that have shaped their company and the way they do business. This is what they believe in. It is their mantra, their passion, and their promise. Features include: a) Keep It Simple - Software never gets simpler by adding more features. They build and design with the mentality that less is more and focus on one function at a time; b) Good Service Makes It Work - Just as important as their software is their customer service to back their software up. They strive to make sure that their service is on point all the time for every customer; c) No Hidden Fees or Contracts - In short, contracts and hidden fees are nonsense. They make sure that signing up for their software is hassle free. Easy in and easy out; and d) Training Not Necessary - Their software is easy to use and doesn't require training. You can pick it up within minutes instead of hours, days, or weeks. This has been added to the tools section of Research Resources Subject Tracer™ Information Blog. <http://www.rdatoolkit.org/> RDA: Resource Description and Access is the new standard for resource description and access designed for the digital world. Built on the foundations established by AACR2, RDA provides a comprehensive set of guidelines and instructions on resource description and access covering all types of content and media. The content of RDA has been developed in a collaborative process led by the Joint Steering Committee. The project is overseen by the Committee of Principals representing: a) American Library Association; b) Canadian Library Association; c) CILIP: Chartered Institute of Library and Information Professionals; d) Library of Congress; e) Library and Archives Canada; f) British Library; and g) National Library of Australia. Designed for the digital world and an expanding universe of metadata users, RDA: Resource Description and Access is the new, unified cataloging standard.

Awarenesswatch™ Paper Review

Tightening the Net: Intellectual Property Micro-regimes and Peer-to-peer Practice in Higher Education Networks by Steven J Jackson and Alok Vimawala

<http://firstmonday.org/htbin/cgiwrap/bin/ojs/index.php/fm/article/view/3584>

Abstract:

This paper examines recent responses by U.S. university administrators to the volume and legal challenges surrounding on-campus and in-residence peer-to-peer (P2P) traffic. Since the earliest days of online P2P activity, universities have served as key flashpoints in the broader file sharing and intellectual property debates. But while there has been considerable attention to the emerging file-sharing case law, and some attention to the shifting legal and political strategies of IP holders most affected by P2P traffic (or most aggressive in asserting their rights), the multiple, varied, and often ambivalent responses of university network administrators have for the most part escaped sustained attention. This paper draws on published survey and original interview data to explore the distinctive and heterogeneous policy sets put together by campus network administrators and decision-makers in dealing with IP issues associated with on-campus file-sharing practice. Such institutional micro-regimes constitute a crucial and understudied border zone between law and culture, functioning as key translation points through which external IP claims get filtered (e.g., DMCA take-down notices), and strategic sites at which a substantial amount of real-world IP regulation is effectively accomplished.

Notes and Suggestions for Virtual Shopping

Whether your gift list is ready or you're wondering how long you can wait to start your holiday shopping, the Federal Trade Commission has online tips to help you get the best deals. The bottom line: Some extra research can really pay off:

Set a Budget. Create a gift list and check it twice to help you stay on track and not overspend.

Decide What Matters. Especially if you're buying gadgets, know what your "must-have" features are vs. those that are just nice to have.

Use Search Engines. Type a company or product name into your search engine with terms like "review," "complaint" or "scam" to find out more about it.

Read Reviews Online. Reviews from other people, experts, and columnists can give you an idea of how a product performs. But don't put all of your trust in one review.

Consider Reputation. A brand's reputation for quality and good customer service can really pay off.

Check Comparison Shopping Sites. They connect to many retailers selling the same product, sometimes at significantly different prices. Keep shipping costs in mind.

Consider Coupons. Some companies offer discounts via e-mail, and some websites collect and list codes for free shipping and other discounts. Search for the store with terms like "discount," "coupon" or "free shipping."

Read Return Policies. Not all stores have the same rules. Some charge fees for return shipping or restocking things like electronics.

Decide How to Pay. When you shop online, credit cards can offer extra protections.

Look for a Secure Checkout. Does the website start with https (the "s" stands for secure) when you're checking out?

For hassle-free online shopping, keep records like e-mails and online receipts in case there's a problem. Also, make sure you know who you're dealing with and protect your personal and financial information, since anyone can set up shop online under almost any name.
